timely and controversial a bed for the night reveals how humanitarian organizations trying to bring relief in an ever more violent and dangerous world are often betrayed and misused and have increasingly lost sight of their purpose drawing on first hand reporting from hot war zones around the world bosnia rwanda congo kosovo sudan and most recently afghanistan david rieff shows us what humanitarian aid workers do in the field and the growing gap between their noble ambitions and their actual capabilities for alleviating suffering tracing the origins of major humanitarian organizations such as the international committee of the red cross doctors without borders and care he describes how many of them have moved from their founding principle of neutrality which gave them access to victims to encouraging the international community to take action to stop civil wars and ethnic cleansing rieff demonstrates how this advocacy has come at a high price by overreaching the humanitarian movement has allowed itself to be hijacked by the major powers sometimes to become a fig leaf for actions that major powers take in their own national interests as in afghanistan sometimes for their inaction as in bosnia and rwanda with the exception of cases of genocide where the moral imperative to act overrides all other considerations rieff contends that if humanitarian organisations are to continue doing what they do best alleviating suffering they must remain independent years of tremendous growth in response to complex emergencies have left a mark on the humanitarian sector various matters that once seemed settled are now subjects of intense debate what is humanitarianism is it limited to the provision of relief to victims of conflict or does it include broader objectives such as human rights democracy promotion development and peacebuilding for much of the last century the principles of humanitarianism were guided by neutrality impartiality and independence more recently some humanitarian organizations have begun to relax these tenets the recognition that humanitarian action can lead to negative consequences has forced humanitarian organizations to measure their effectiveness to reflect on their ethical positions and to consider not only the values that motivate their actions but also the consequences of those actions in the indispensable humanitarianism in question michael barnett and thomas g weiss bring together scholars from a variety of disciplines to address the humanitarian identity crisis including humanitarianism s relationship to accountability great powers privatization and corporate philanthropy warlords and the ethical evaluations that inform life and death decision making during and after emergencies humanitarian protection has evolved from an act of charity into a legal obligation not to remove certain categories of non nationals written with both the new humanitarian worker and the experienced veteran in mind the book deals in turn with the main stages of a humanitarian assignment it deals with safety and security in the field staying healthy managing stress coping with the trauma of others and dealing with returning home at the end of an assignment humanitarian intervention invariably rubs shoulders with politics albeit awkwardly and sometimes even with tragic results tensions between them take many forms ranging from different assessments of the extent or even the existence of a crisis to claims that humanitarian assistance is not saving innocent lives but sustaining politico military forces or to the conclusion that the constraints upon them compel aid agencies to withdraw from the area of operation completely whether to ensure the safety of their own staff or because they believe that their integrity is unacceptably compromised by staying development and humanitarianism addresses these and other dilemmas that aid agencies face in interpreting the principles of humanitarianism in contexts where they risk being manipulated by political agendas the contributors have extensive experience as frontline aid workers agency policy makers academics and researchers and professional consultants around the world like every book in the development in practice readers series development and humanitarianism draws on the contents of the acclaimed international journal development in practice and includes an annotated resource list of recent publications relevant journals organizations and websites presenting a cutting edge guide to thinking and action other contributors gretchen alther andrew bonwick julia buckmaster udan fernando dorothea hilhorst jonathan makuwira vanessa pupavac volker schimmel astri suhrke frank james tester martha thompson and suzanne williams
