the grammar of knowledge offers both a linguistic and anthropological perspective on the expression of information sources as well as inferences assumptions probability and possibility and gradations of doubt and beliefs in a range of languages the book investigates twelve different languages from families including tibeto burman nakh dagestani and austronesian all of which share the property of requiring the source of information to be specified in every sentence in these languages it may not be possible to say merely that the man went fishing instead the source of evidence for the statement must also be specified usually through the use of evidential markers for example it may be necessary to indicate whether the speaker saw the man go fishing has simply assumed that the man went fishing or was told that he went fishing by a third party some languages such as hinuq and tatar distinguish between first hand and non first hand information sources others such as ersu mark three distinct types of information directly required inferred or assumed and reported some require an even greater level of specification ash®ninka peren® from south america has a specific marker to express suspicions or misgivings like others in the series the book illustrates and examines these aspects of language in different cultural and linguistic settings it will interest linguists of all persuasions as well as linguistically minded anthropologists this book aims to synthesize different directions in knowledge studies into a unified theory of knowledge and knowledge processes it explicates important relations between knowledge and information it provides the readers with understanding of the essence and structure of knowledge explicating operations and process that are based on knowledge and vital for society the book also highlights how the theory of knowledge paves the way for more advanced design and utilization of computers and networks this is an ornate tale of the long journey in the pursuit of knowledge in this fleeting world of more than ninety years consisting of memories of the past and the ensuing travel on complicated uneven and foggy paths there may have been alteration in the speed of the author in this travel but it never came to a standstill he never gave up courage persistence and perseverance under any circumstances which culminated in the transformation of every failure or frustration in this journey into accomplishments by the grace of god

this is the first book of its kind on sudan and arguably one of the first in north africa we are part of an emerging more cosmopolitan approach that calls for a reassessment of ideas about not only the concept of identities but also about migration and technology especially social media our essayists engage in redefinitions the broadening of our key variables the linking and intersecting of concepts and the investigations of methods and ethics and opt for an approach that is at once culturally specific to sudan one of the most fluid social landscapes in the world and transnational our essays address the narrowness of studies of migration and note the almost total neglect in the broader sudan literature of the rise of technology mobile telephony and social media in particular furthermore our essayists address the near neglect in the sudan literature of certain categories of people such as youth or certain diverse spaces such as neighborhoods or gold mines we have also been attempting to move away from the nearly stereotypic descriptions of sudan to deal with topics that align sudan with transnational issues and themes knowledge production among them this multidisciplinary collection of essays is the first comprehensive work to grapple explicitly with the question of knowledge production in such a diverse social landscape we discuss the impact of current trends in information technology and contemporary forms of identity and mobility on knowledge production these issues are pertinent for different sectors such as academia government or business and as we demonstrate reveal a myriad of possibilities for studying diverse population groups like youth women diaspora or specific political contexts such as conflict or oppression the past as liberation from history explores the difference between the social construction we call history and the lived experience we call the past arguing that by failing to distinguish between the two we risk unquestionably accepting as authoritative accounts of the past in which we have no voice it shows that identities rooted in the richness and variety of the past even when the history is painful serve the purpose of drawing us closer to one another as we seek to realize our shared dreams of life liberty and the pursuit of happiness by placing in counterpoint broader educational concerns with the teaching experiences of the author the study also explores this individual s testimony as a teacher seeking to make relevant for his students the examination of the past disaster research has been studied from many angles seldom targeting its implications for vulnerable territories in africa entities most subject to the effects of climate change are often undeveloped and located in disadvantaged regions post disaster communities need to scrutinize the social political economic and cultural structures that stagnate sustainable growth acknowledging that low economic development and high climate costs cannot coexist this collected volume interrogates the challenge for disaster prone territories to determine strategies for restructuring and redesigning their environment this book proposes the creation of knowledge economies whereby empowered communities may produce innovative knowledge translatable across the african diaspora
