there s no way you can do this reentry thing orlando lucero tells himself after getting out of prison he has spent most of his life institutionalized first in an orphanage and then in the denver youth authority for smuggling weed orlando knows nothing about freedom what does one do with it what is it his brother promised to teach him the carpentry trade but orlando quickly discovers camilo is like their parents an addict robbing and stealing to feed his habit so he turns to lila his prison pen pal who encouraged both his poetry writing and sexual fantasies soon he moves in with her and engages in the acts he dreamed about while incarcerated but living the straight life seems impossible freedom is full of hazards lots of sharp edges and they cut me at every turn as he is sucked back into a life of crime he can t help but think going back to prison would be a relief renowned poet jimmy santiago baca explores in lyrical prose one young man s attempts to break free from the cycle of addiction violence and abuse that contributed to his imprisonment and impede his search for happiness and a productive life in a society that considers him a criminal because of his brown skin and where those in authority including a parade of priests when he was just a boy take advantage of him orlando must learn to believe in himself against all the odds in spite of the institutionalized racism he has endured since boyhood fiercely moving the two long narrative poems of martín meditations on the south valley revolve around the semi autobiographical figure of martin a mestizo or detribalized apache abandoned as a child and a long time on the hard path to building his own family martin at last finds his home in the stubborn and beautiful world of the barrio jimmy santiago baca writes with unconcealed passion denise levertov states in her introduction but he is far from being a naive realist what makes his writing so exciting to me is the way in which it manifests both an intense lyricism and that transformative vision which perceives the mythic and archetypal significance of life events a collection of poems that grows out of the american southwest focusing on family and community life of the barrio sharing births and deaths neighbors and seasons and injustices and victories
