friedrich list is the father of economic nationalism and the historical school of economics responding to adam smith's free market apologetics in the national system of political economy list provides a theoretical basis for state intervention in the economy but he does much more than this as part of a wider trend in european thought list affirms the primacy of history in developing our worldview the national system of political economy does not begin with theory but with history in so doing list shows that england's rise as a commercial power was not facilitated by free markets but by protectionism drawing his theory from historical fact rather than the other way around list's avowed liberalism is overshadowed by his illiberal priors and so the economic history of the 20th century was one of listian principles being put to use by illiberal regimes such as russia china and germany his thought also governed the economic policy of another developmental state for over a century america smith and marx formed the basis of 20th century economic theory but friedrich list stands as a colossus astride the 20th century forming the basis of economic practice for all major powers until mid century in his introduction to this edition francis o beirne shows that the great economic clash has never been between capitalism and socialism but between capitalism and nationalism with marxism a revolutionary force but an economic irrelevancy
