widely acclaimed as a horror movie actress fay wray is best remembered for her performances in king kong and four other classic 1930s film thrillers doctor x the most dangerous game mystery of the wax museum and the vampire bat yet her film career encompassed much more than these memorable turns as a damsel in distress wray appeared in 77 feature films between 1925 and 1958 playing leading roles in 67 of these sadly the true breadth of wray s film career is not readily apparent today as many of her films including her entire silent film output have been lost or are available only on a limited archival basis this heavily illustrated filmography of wray s work at last makes obvious her sizeable contribution to the film industry it begins with an overview of her professional acting career from her period of great demand after the making of king kong to her gradual decline in the late 1930s the filmography is divided into three sections that describe and discuss the complete collection of fay wray s films the first section introduces wray s early silent feature film appearances the second covers her leading lady period in popular horror thrillers and other films in the sound era and the third covers her latter day supporting roles two appendices document her work in theatrical film shorts and her television appearances commentary throughout also includes first person interviews with fay wray

a treat to read and a joy to perform this second collection of alan ayckbourn s work is a cornucopia of some of his wonderfully inventive children s plays from the story of the teenage lucy in invisible friends who revives her childhood imaginary friend when things get difficult at home onto the storytellers in my very own story and this is where we came in and finally to young ernie who illucinates all sorts of wild and weird happenings with astonishing results
