we live in a world that is transitioning from focus on early childhood education within individual countries into a global perspective that considers how early childhood education is conducted in many diverse cultures and environments the challenge on a global basis is how to develop programs in countries and environments that are different from a specifically western perspective economic geographic and cultural influences infuse early childhood programs around the world in 1999 a group of educators representing 36 countries developed guidelines for establishing minimum standards for preschool programs a purpose for developing the guidelines was to provide guidance for countries that wished to evaluate and improve their own programs a second purpose was to help developing countries initiating preschools to have relevant information about quality programs the later development of an assessment tool based on the global guidelines served as a vehicle to use the guidelines to assess a single program or multiple programs the continuing work with these guidelines in many countries throughout the world since 2000 has resulted in the collection of information that reveals the uniqueness of programs in different countries taking the body as a locus for discussion rachael s burke and judith duncan argue not only that implicit cultural practices shape most of the interactions taking place in early childhood curricula and pedagogy but that many of these practices often go unnoticed or unrecognized as being pedagogy current scholars inspired by Foucault acknowledge that the body is socially and culturally produced and historically situated it is simultaneously a part of nature and society as well as a representation of the way that nature and society can be conceived every natural symbol originating from the body contains and conveys a social meaning and every culture selects its own meaning from the myriad of potential body symbolisms bodies as sites of cultural reflection in early childhood education uses empirical examples from qualitative fieldwork conducted in New Zealand and Japan to explore these theories and discuss the ways in which children's bodies represent a central focus in teachers' pedagogical discussions and create contexts for the embodiment of children's experiences in the early years probing the shortcomings of contemporary early years provision whilst offering practical and informed solutions early childhood education redefined at once celebrates the progress made in this field since the publication of the Start Right Report 1994 whilst also calling for further changes to ensure that all children are able to start right to become effective independent learners developing and emphasising the importance of concepts which have become overlooked within modern educational policy and practice yet which remain key to our children's development this book considers how elements such as attachment and love movement and exercise and language and talk may be better integrated into early years practice via the three main vectors of parenting the curriculum and pedagogy from a revised curriculum from birth to seven renamed Key Stage 1 to a greater emphasis on formative assessment and the promotion of pedagogies including purposeful play planning in the moment and attachment theory chapters build on the principles set out in the Start Right Report and take into consideration the research and reflection developed over the last quarter of a decade reopening a vital debate and challenging governments education providers parents and professionals to re-define what young children need to grow develop and learn in our contemporary society this timely response to the Start Right Report is essential reading for all those involved in early years research education and care
