Proceedings of a conference sponsored by the National Institutes of Health in Washington, DC, September 19-20, 1996. Research and community practitioners worked together to review the research on drug abuse prevention, explored its ramifications for individuals, families, and communities, and developed recommendations for future collaborations and applications of this knowledge in settings across the country. Keynote addresses were given by Donna E. Shalala, PhD, Secretary of Health and Human Services, and Gen. Barry R. McCaffrey, Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy. Includes a list of conference speakers and panel and work group participants.

There was a day when society shielded its children from the often cruel world at least in the so-called developed countries. The exposure of children to the worst perversions society can conjure up has never been greater. Children have reached the exalted level of being treated, seduced, and targeted to as a market.
