this book offers a fresh perspective on work showing how past events ideas practices and values haunt organizations in a contemporary context where organizations are ever more obsessed with growth and transformation the book discovers a politics of time at the heart of questions about power and ethics it develops a non linear approach to the history of education showing what it means to inherit from previous generations and how encounters with ghosts can open possibilities of other alternative futures for academics and students across management education and sociology the book is a crucial resource for understanding contemporary organizations it invites you to find new ways to care for the future of work temporal divergence creates a need for new narratives and paradigms in diverging time david carvounas supports this assertion through detailed expository and diagnostic readings of kant hegel and marx he focuses on their contribution to our understanding of modernity as an epochal shift in the relationship between past and future recasting the significance of the past and future of the modern present despite their different solutions to the problem of temporal coordination they urged the modern world to look not to the past but to the newly opened future for continuity meaning and purpose this book not only offers a fresh look at a defining characteristic of modernity but also makes a compelling case that a coherent modern temporal structure requires a sustainable orientation toward the future an orientation that kant hegel and marx delineate in distinctive and powerful ways
