A solid, insightful explanation of how the internet has armed the consumer, which is to say everyone, against the mindless blather of corporate messaging attempts. Drop everything and read this book. The Wall Street Journal, the woman next to you in the coffee shop, typing madly on her laptop, just might be determining the ending to next year's block-buster film, or how quickly the hottest new PDA hits store shelves in homes, dorm rooms, waiting rooms, planes, and trains around the world. Millions of people are exercising enormous influence on what we buy, even though they have no official connection to those products and services. Who are they? What motivates them? Marketing experts Ben McConnell and Jackie Huba explore the ramifications of social media in citizen marketing. As everyday people increasingly create content on behalf of companies, brands, or products, they are collaborating with others just like themselves and forming ever-growing communities of enthusiasts and evangelists. From the rough to the sophisticated, the user-generated media of blogs, online bulletin boards, podcasts, photos, songs, and animations are influencing companies' customer relationships, product design, and marketing campaigns. Whether they participate willingly or not, citizen marketers is the first book to document this phenomenon, examining some of the early winners and losers in this new genre, as well as some of its most noted constituents with their exceptional knowledge of brands, products, companies, and industries. The citizen marketers are democratizing traditional notions of communication and marketing, even entire business models. Features research on social media, case studies of people and organizations fueling the growth of citizen marketing, clarifies the context and importance of technological and societal shifts that are changing the nature of customer expectations and relationships.
