this book radically re conceptualises the origins of the european union as a trans and supranational polity as it emerged between the schuman plan of may 1950 and the first enlargement of the European Communities at the start of 1973 drawing upon social science theories and debates as well as recent historical research. Wolfram Kaiser and Morten Rasmussen in their introductory chapters discuss innovative ways of narrating the history of the EU as the emergence of a transnational political society and supranational political system building on these insights. Eight chapters based on multilateral and multi-archival research follow each with case studies of transnational networks, public sphere and institutional cultures and policy making which illustrate systematically related aspects of the early history of the EU. In the concluding chapter, leading political scientist Alex Warleigh Lack demonstrates how greater interdisciplinary cooperation especially between contemporary history and political studies can significantly advance our knowledge of the EU as a complex polity. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of politics, European studies and history.

This book combining scholarship with readability shows that political corruption must itself be analysed politically. Spectacularly corrupt politicians the exception rather than the rule are usually symptoms not causes and much political corruption is simply normal politics taken to excess but in a world in which anti-corruption strategies themselves are often thinly disguised examples of political corruption the ways in which political systems address their own corruption are as varied and fascinating in character as crucial to comprehend. A valuable read for anyone studying social science disciplines such as politics, international relations, sociology, anthropology, criminology and public policy as well as the global community of anti-corruption activists, professional politicians, police, business people and lawyers.

This authoritative volume analyses the practice and impact of political leadership aiming to position it within a more integrated framework.

This book explains the aspirations and concerns of Islamist actors in the aftermath of the Arab uprisings by looking at two sets of relationships between Turkey's ruling AKP and the Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood and the AKP and Tunisia's Ennahda. It presents a unique analysis of the interplay between the AKP, Ennahda and the Muslim Brotherhood characterizing the actors, the structure and the main features of the relationship and thereby illuminating a political confluence among these three critical Islamist entities in the aftermath of the Arab uprisings. Existing scholarship has assumed that this relationship revolves primarily around an ideological Islamist agenda. However, this research demonstrates a more complex and nuanced situation. Ezgi Basaran puts forward that the interplay was not based on an aspiration of building an ideological Islamist bloc in the MENA region but rather revolved around the concept of political success and had a strong neoliberal ethos. Basaran draws on data collected from over 60 interviews with high-level members of the AKP, Ennahda and Muslim Brotherhood to demonstrate how in the hope of achieving success and legitimization, Ennahda and the Muslim Brotherhood have relied on the managerial prescriptions provided by the AKP. The contents of this success formula were derived from the AKP's experience as an Islamist party in power since 2002 and includes tactics on crisis evasion, legitimization, winning elections and maintaining power.
