the conventional wisdom in english education is that rubrics are the best and easiest tools for assessment but sometimes it s better to be unconventional in rethinking rubrics in writing assessment maja wilson offers a new perspective on rubrics and argues for a better more responsive way to think about assessing writers progress though you may sense a disconnect between student centered teaching and rubric based assessment you may still use rubrics for convenience or for want of better alternatives rethinking rubrics in writing assessment gives you the impetus to make a change demonstrating how rubrics can hurt kids and replace professional decision making with an inauthentic pigeonholing that stamps standardization onto a notably nonstandard process with an emphasis on thoughtful planning and teaching wilson shows you how to reconsider writing assessment so that it aligns more closely with high quality instruction and avoids the potentially damaging effects of rubrics stop listening to the conventional wisdom and turn instead to a compelling new voice to find out why rubrics are often replaceable open rethinking rubrics in writing assessment and let maja wilson start you down the path to more sensitive authentic style of writing assessment by close engagement with both traditional and contemporary approaches to ancient christian literature this volume delineates a historiographical problem at the same time rendering patristics as part of the subject matter of a new literary history the essays consider how one should account for the abiding formativeness of latin christian writing of the fourth and fifth centuries ce and what demands such writing lay on a modern history of literature the main trends associated with the economic crisis neoliberal restructuring and the growth of rural poverty rates in latin america include a continued diversification of rural household income generating strategies an increase in the number of household members seeking off farm employment and the increased participation of rural women as both own account and wage workers in the agricultural as well as non agricultural sectors while methodological problems persist in analysing changes in rural women s work over time the dominant trend in the region over the past several decades has been towards the feminization of agriculture the growth in women s agricultural wage employment has been concentrated in the non traditional agro export sector favoured under neoliberalism specifically in the production and packing of fresh vegetables fruits and flowers for northern markets what now constitutes latin america s leading agricultural export rubric in many countries women and children make up half or more of the field labour for these crops while women constitute the vast majority of the workers in the packing houses geared to the export market nonetheless the characteristics of this employment principally its temporary seasonal and precarious nature have made it difficult to capture quantitatively in national censuses and household surveys the essay analyses the role of gender segmented labour markets in increasing the demand for female labour as well as the significance of women s increased participation in wage labour for female empowerment there is also evidence stronger for some countries than others of a feminization of smallholder production as growing numbers of rural women become the principal farmers that is own account workers in agriculture this phenomenon is associated with an increase in the proportion of rural female household heads male absence from the farm in turn related to growing male migration and or employment in off farm pursuits and the decreased viability of peasant farming under neoliberalism there is little question that the principal factor driving these trends is the need for rural households to diversify their livelihoods the combination of growing land shortage economic crises and unfavourable policies for domestic agriculture has meant that peasant households can no longer sustain themselves on the basis of agricultural production alone the response to the crisis of peasant agriculture has been an increase in the number of rural household members pursuing off farm activities whether these are male female or include both genders depends on a myriad of factors with household composition and the stage of the domestic cycle and the dynamism and gendered nature of local regional and international labour markets being among the most important
