twilight of the idols means that the old truth is on its last legs declared friedrich nietzsche in this 1889 polemic forceful in his language and profound in his message the philosopher delivered the nineteenth century's most devastating attack on christianity intended by nietzsche as a general introduction to his philosophy it assails the idols of western philosophy and culture including the concepts of socratic rationality and christian morality written while nietzsche was at the peak of his powers less than a year before the onset of the insanity that gripped him until his death in 1900 this work's proximity to the end of the author's career renders it a distinctive portrait from his later period the source of the famous dictum whatever does not kill me makes me stronger it blazes with provocative inflammatory rhetoric that challenges readers to reexamine what they worship and why

at the end of the eighteenth century the hasidic movement was facing an internal crisis to what extent should the teachings of baal shem tov and maggid of mezritch with their implicit spiritual demands be transmitted to the rank and file of the movement previously these teachings had been reserved for a small elite it was at this point that the habad school emerged with a communication ethos encouraging the transmission of esoteric to the broad reaches of the jewish world communicating the infinite explores the first two generations of the habad school under r shneur zalman of liadi and his son r dov ber and examines its early opponents beginning with the different levels of communication in the teachings of the baal shem tov and the maggid and his disciples naftali loewenthal traces the unfolding of the dialectic between the urge to transmit esoteric ideas and a powerful inner restraint gradually r shneur zalman came to the fore as the prime exponent of the communication ethos loewenthal follows the development of his discourses up to the time of his death when r dov ber and r aaron halevi horowitz formed their respective lubavitch and staroselye schools the author continues with a detailed examination of the teachings of r dov ber an inspired mystic central in his thought was the esoteric concept of self abnegation bitul yet this combined with the quest to communicate hasidic teachings to every level of society including women from the late eighteenth century onwards the main problem for the jewish world was posed by the fall of the walls of the social and political ghetto generally the response was either to secularize or abandon altogether traditional judaism or to retreat from the threatening modern world into enclave religiosity by stressing communication the habad school opened the way for a middle range response that was neither a retreat into elitism nor an abandonment of tradition based on years of research from hebrew and yiddish primary source materials communicating the infinite is a work of importance not only to specialists of judaic studies but also to historians and sociologists
