a collection of eight short stories and three essays they are my first published writings the stories are varied there are some that sprang out of nowhere and some out of experience the lives of cats the first story is based on an adventure of our cat miss bickel named after travis bickel in taxi driver for reasons too complex to explain here that s her on the cover her story has been expanded somewhat wistfully by my imagination and some research into cats and the details of my local landscape a ghost story has been knocking about in my brain for a while first as a short film idea and eventually as a story what are ghosts who knows but this is one possibility or anyway one that entertains me a long time ago began with a newspaper article i read the man at tegel airport wrote itself one afternoon when i was sitting in that airport waiting for my flight home to london the making of him is derived from my own experience things i heard and witnessed and suffered at school i wrote lost after falling down in the snow while working in oslo and being concussed for 36 hours or so a very surreal experience but mainly this story is just a fiction i rather like the way it ends all the world is an observation of life here in kerry loosely based on the varied hard but satisfying and unsatisfying lives i have observed here but all of the detail is entirely of my own invention ups and downs i wrote for a competition for which it was not chosen but i liked the challenge of writing a story in 400 words or less and i like the man and his uncertain grasp on happiness the three essays are about places seen and thoughts provoked by those visits an island called gee day is about a journey i made with my wife and some friends to the edge of the lake eyre basin in australia the grave of many thousands is a record of visits to dachau near munich in germany and miracles is about a trip to lourdes as a teenager
