cosmo woman this is one of the few full length explorations of the women s magazine market focussing on cosmopolitan magazine oliver whitehorne considers every aspect of the women s magazine from themes and issues to images and style the feminism in women s magazines is discussed in detail and is related to second wave feminism and third wave or postmodern feminism as well as cosmopolitan the author also studies many other magazines in the women s magazine market and related magazines such as lifestyle magazines and men's magazines the author looks at the use of advertising and consumerism in women's magazines and other lifestyle and consumer magazines drawing on many examples of ads which are deconstructed in detail extract from chapter two the cosmo woman let's start with the typical front page of cosmopolitan as with most other women's magazines cosmopolitan features a woman a model smiling it's not a movie star or someone with a name the model we see inside is called rohini models supermodels are known by their first names naomi claudia kate the imagery of the woman is positive exuberant young tanned smart in control self-confident the photographs on the covers of women's magazines speak of healthy living clean washed clothes where white is truly sparkling white teeth are perfect there are no wrinkles or unsightly flabby bits of skin the models skin is blemishless jewellery is perfect and there are no bad hair days for cover stars this woman is nameless but she is also cosmo woman centrepiece of the image chosen to sell this month's issue of the magazine the model is selected to portray the mood and aims of the magazine and to leap out of the other magazines on the racks she is of course also the mirror of the audience but a stylized idealized mirror the cover of cosmo shows the would-be buyer and audience what they could be like it is a piece of advertising the magazine cover it invites the browser into the world of the magazine it has to make a direct and instantaneous appeal to the potential buyer booksellers know that the most important aspect of a book's sales potential is its cover magazines have developed cover design to a refined artform and each magazine has its house style its code of subtle laws that consumers read in a very sophisticated manner there may not be much to read on the cover but it takes a while to really explain and understand the significance of every aspect of a cover like a movie poster or a burger bar menu a magazine cover is a highly stylized product physical details of the magazine cover include type size shape and colour size and texture of paper the sell lines the layout it's also crucial where the magazine is displayed high or low or next to particular magazines
