in the past decades translation studies have increasingly focused on the ethical dimension of translational activity with an emphasis on reflexivity to assert the role of the researcher in highlighting issues of visibility creativity and ethics in reflexive translation studies silvia kadiu investigates the viability of theories that seek to empower translation by making visible its transformative dimension for example by championing the visibility of the translating subject the translator's right to creativity the supremacy of human translation or an autonomous study of translation inspired by Derrida's deconstructive thinking Kadiu presents practical ways of challenging theories that argue reflexivity is the only way of developing an ethical translation. She questions the capacity of reflexivity to counteract the power relations at play in translation between minor and dominant languages for example and problematises affirmative claims about self-knowledge by using translation itself as a process of critical reflection in exploring the interaction between form and content. Reflexive translation studies promotes the need for an experimental multi-sensory and intuitive practice which invites students, scholars, and practitioners alike to engage with theory productively and creatively through translation.

This volume addresses the role played by translation in international political communication and news reporting and brings to light the usually invisible link between politics, media, and translation. The contributors explore the interrelationship between media in the widest sense and translation with a focus on political texts, institutional contexts, and translation policies. These topics are explored from a translation studies perspective thus bringing a new disciplinary view to the investigation of political discourse and the language of the media. The first part of the volume focuses on textual analysis investigating transformations that occur in translation processes and the second part examines institutional contexts and policies and their effects on translation production and reception.

Experience is a multilayered, cumulative affair with transformation at its core. Its study a necessary first step for its translation requires an exploration of embodiment, the senses, and cultural and social environments. The second of two volumes this book explores how artefacts as outcomes of experience brought about by the artist-translator perform semiotic work. This semiotic work arises through the intervention of their makers but also through their viewers' audience often through the latter's direct participation in the artefacts' creation which we see as an open-ended process drawing on diverse examples from across the world. The chapters explore visual materiality, the digital world, and the multisensory nature of artefacts such as monuments, festivals, theatre performances, artworks, rituals, the urban environment, and human bodies, the embodied perception of which may draw holistically or variously on the haptic, olfactory, auditory, kinetic, or kinaesthetic senses. Throughout the book, experiential translation is framed as a political endeavour that allows experience to be shared across linguistic, cultural, generational, or gendered divides in the form of artefacts that facilitate transformation and the acquisition of knowledge. This book and its companion volume, The Experience of Translation: Materiality and Play in Experiential Translation, include an international range of contributions from graduate students and early career researchers to tenured academics in translation studies, comparative literature, performance arts, fine arts, media and cultural studies, as well as educators, artists and curators. It will be of particular interest to translators and arts practitioners, scholars and researchers in the transdisciplinary field of humanities.
