a wide ranging and accessible account of the pioneering professional women writers who flourished during the romantic period women's literary histories usually start in the later middle ages but recent scholarship has shown that actually women were at the heart of the emergence of the english literary tradition women writing and religion in england and beyond 650 1100 focuses on the period before the so called barking renaissance of women's writing in the 12th century by examining the surviving evidence of women's authorship as well as the evidence of women's engagement with literary culture more widely diane watt argues that early women's writing was often lost suppressed or deliberately destroyed in particular she considers the different forms of male overwriting to which she ascribes the multiple connotations of destruction preservation control and suppression she uses the term to describe the complex relationship between male authors and their female subjects to capture the ways in which texts can attempt to control and circumscribe female autonomy written by one of the leading experts in medieval women s writing women writing and religion in england and beyond 650 1100 examines women s literary engagement in monasteries such as ely whitby barking and wilton abbey as well as letters and hagiographies from the 8th and 9th centuries diane watt provides a much needed look at women s writing in the early medieval period that is crucial to understanding women s literary history more broadly beyond brushtalk explores interactions between japanese and chinese writers during the golden age of such exchange 1919 to 1937 during this period there were unprecedented opportunities for exchange between writers which was made possible by the ease of travel between japan and china during these years and the educational background of chinese writers as students in japan although the salubrious interaction that developed during that period was destined not to last it nevertheless was significant as a courageous essay at cultural interaction this book will appeal not only to those interested in sino japanese studies an increasingly important field of study in its own right but will also appeal to scholars of both japanese literature and chinese literature and researchers whose areas of interest correspond to the major writers included in this work such as lu xun and zhou zuoren on the chinese side and tanizaki jun ichirō and hayashi fumiko on the japanese side the relations and resulting literary works involving these major writers are often relatively neglected aspects of their total output and will draw interest from scholars of their work this book will be accessible to both sinologists and japanologists with little background in the corresponding field and to the generalist possessing an interest in literary exchange
