between dignity and despair draws on the extraordinary memoirs diaries interviews and letters of jewish women and men to give us the first intimate portrait of jewish life in nazi germany kaplan tells the story of jews in germany not from the hindsight of the holocaust nor by focusing on the persecutors but from the bewildered and ambiguous perspective of jews trying to navigate their daily lives in a world that was becoming more and more insane answering the charge that jews should have left earlier kaplan shows that far from seeming inevitable the holocaust was impossible to foresee precisely because nazi repression occurred in irregular and unpredictable steps until the massive violence of novemer 1938 then the flow of emigration turned into a torrent only to be stopped by the war by that time jews had been evicted from their homes robbed of their possessions and their livelihoods shunned by their former friends persecuted by their neighbors and driven into forced labor for those trapped in germany mere survival became a nightmare of increasingly desperate options many took their own lives to retain at least some dignity in death others went underground and endured the fears of nightly bombings and the even greater terror of being discovered by the nazis most were murdered all were pressed to the limit of human endurance and human loneliness focusing on the fate of families and particularly women s experience between dignity and despair takes us into the neighborhoods into the kitchens shops and schools to give us the shape and texture the very feel of what it was like to be a jew in nazi germany this book documents a little known aspect of the jewish experience in america it is a fascinating account of how a group of jewish refugees from nazi germany came to dominate cattle dealing in south central new york and maintain a jewish identity even while residing in small towns and villages that are overwhelmingly christian the book pays particular attention to the unique role played by women in managing the transition to the united states in helping their husbands accumulate capital and in recreating a german jewish community yet levine goes further than her analysis of german jewish refugees she also argues that it is possible to explain the situations of other immigrant and ethnic groups using the structure network identity framework that arises from this research according to levine situating the lives of immigrants and refugees within the larger context of economic and social change but without losing sight of the significance of social networks and everyday life shows how social structure class ethnicity and gender interact to account for immigrant adaptation and mobility
