an aesthetic perspective on the short fiction of chekhov joyce hemingway o connor and carver taking a distinctively aesthetic approach to the genre of realist short fiction kerry mcsweeney clusters the work of five masters anton chekhov james joyce ernest hemingway flannery o connor and raymond carver to offer a poetics of the form for students and scholars at the center of this argument is the notion that the realist short story is a glimpse powerful and tightly focused into a world that the writer must precisely craft and in which the reader must fully invest selecting writers from different generational national and cultural backgrounds mcsweeney chooses writers based on their commitment to the realist representation of experience and their shared belief in the importance and efficacy of the short story form by considering their efforts in tandem he develops a means to assess the strategies and claims of realist short fiction mcsweeney demonstrates that when the comments these writers have made about their work are assembled and critically scrutinized the result is an aesthetic critical model as opposed to more interpretative models that focus attention on the determination or indetermination of meanings he suggests that a fully adequate reading of a realist short story involves the integration of three components the enjoyment and contemplation of the story in and of itself affective receptivity or a response to the story's emotional content and cognitive activity or the reflective consideration of the story's conceptual implications in individual chapters on Chekov, Joyce, Hemingway, O'Connor, and Carver. This presentational model is applied to widely known and often anthologized readings from each writer. McSweeney brings into sharp focus the distinctive features of each piece, makes qualitative discriminations, and assesses the profitability of other critical models. He concludes with an invitation to test the mettle of his approach in reading other realist short story writers.

The essays in this volume seek to explore the genre of the short story in India and its relationship with English language and literature. Various aspects of the question are taken up: the impact of colonialism, the way English has shaped or not short story writing, why, how, and in what contexts English words are used, feminist perspectives in the writings of women, the Indian diaspora, the teaching of the short story to Indian students, and so on.

Beginning in the 1890s, reaching its first full realization by modernist writers in the 1920s, and brought to its heyday during the Canadian Renaissance, starting in the 1960s, the short story has become Canada's flagship genre. It continues to attract the country's most accomplished and innovative writers today; among them Margaret Atwood, Mavis Gallant, Alice Munro, Carol Shields, and many others. Yet in contrast to the stature and popularity of the genre and the writers who partake in it, surprisingly little literary criticism and theory has been devoted to the Canadian short story. This collection redresses that imbalance by providing the first collection of critical interpretations of a range of thirty well-known and often anthologized Canadian short stories from the genre's beginnings through the twentieth century. A historical survey of the genre introduces the volume, and a timeline comparing the genre's development in Canada, the US, and Great Britain via representative examples completes it. The collection is geared both to specialists in and to students of Canadian literature. For the latter, it is of particular benefit that the volume provides not only a collection of interpretations but a comprehensive introduction to the history of the Canadian short story. Reingard M. Nischik is professor and chair of American Literature at the University of Constance, Germany.

A collection of outstanding short fiction by more than sixty authors from the British Commonwealth features the work of Graham Greene, D. H. Lawrence, Virginia Woolf, Nadine Gordimer, James Joyce, Dylan Thomas, Somerset Maugham, and others.
