revisits the war crimes trial of albert kesselring commander in chief of german troops in italy during wold war ii who was sentenced to death for the killing of thousands of civilians in Italy reveals how the commutation of that death sentence was one of the earliest maneuverings in the nascent Cold War.

This book draws together the many strands of applied psychology which are relevant to policing in the 1990s. Police training has undergone considerable changes over the last few years with far more emphasis being put on such subjects as psychology.

Since the early 1990s, concern has grown about the harassment and intimidation of prosecution witnesses, and as a result several police forces have set up specialist units to protect witnesses under threat. This is the first ever book to offer an in-depth analysis of a witness protection programme, including interviews with both protected witnesses and police officers involved. It examines the structure, cost, and effectiveness of such schemes and suggests how they might be expanded and developed at local, national, and international levels.

When the Guardian first published details of Jonathan Aitken's abuse of power, he resigned from the cabinet and vowed to fight for his name. In this book, three of the journalists who worked on the original story reveal the details of what unfolded.
