are humans composed of a body and a nonmaterial mind or soul or are we purely physical beings opinion is sharply divided over this issue in this clear and concise book nancey murphy argues for a physicalist account but one that does not diminish traditional views of humans as rational moral and capable of relating to god this position is motivated not only by developments in science and philosophy but also by biblical studies and christian theology the reader is invited to appreciate the ways in which organisms are more than the sum of their parts that higher human capacities such as morality free will and religious awareness emerge from our neurobiological complexity and develop through our relation to others to our cultural inheritance and most importantly to god murphy addresses the questions of human uniqueness religious experience and personal identity before and after bodily resurrection recent research in the philosophy of religion anthropology and philosophy of mind has prompted the need for a more integrated comprehensive and systematic theology of human nature this project constructively develops a theological accounting of human persons by drawing from a cartesian as a term of art model of anthropology which is motivated by a long tradition as was common among patristics medievals and reformed scholastics farris draws from philosophical resources to articulate christian doctrine as he approaches theological anthropology exploring a substance dualism model the author highlights relevant theological texts and passages of scripture arguing that this model accounts for doctrinal essentials concerning theological anthropology while farris is not explicitly interested in thorough critique of materialist ontology he notes some of the significant problems associated with it rather the present project is an attempt to revitalize the resources found in cartesianism by responding to some common worries associated with it in science of the soul in ibn sīnā's pointers and reminders michael a rapoport provides a philological and interpretive guide for critically reading and interpreting ibn sīnā's avicenna d 1037 most challenging and influential text rapoport argues that chapters vii x of the pointers present scientific explanations for phenomena related to the human soul from intellection to divination magic and marvels within the framework of ibn sīnā's metaphysics of the rational soul this book dispels widespread notions that the pointers represents ibn sīnā's mystical or sufi philosophy and therefore stands apart from the rest of his corpus situated in broader science and religion discussions the creation of self is the first book length defense of a creationist view of persons as souls this book therefore serves as both a novel argument for god's creation of selves and as a critique of contemporary materialist and emergent self alternatives critically examining naturalistic views that argue for a regular law like process behind the emergence of personhood author joshua farris argues on the assumption that persons are fundamentally unique individuals that look more like singularities of nature rather than material products grounded in regularity or predictability from past events by extending the basic intuition that we are unique and mysterious individuals farris develops a sophisticated analytic defense of the soul that requires a sufficient explanation not found in nature but made by a creator who has intentions and the power to bring about novel entities in the world the creation of self gives philosophers theologians and the lay intellectual grounding for thinking about persons as religious beings it aims to help readers understand why recent scientifically motivated objections to the soul are unsuccessful and why we must consider a religious conception of persons as souls as a common starting point what are humans what makes us who we are many think that we are just complicated machines or animals that are different from machines only by being conscious in are we bodies or souls richard swinburne comes to the defence of the soul and presents new philosophical arguments that are supported by modern neuroscience when scientific advances enable neuroscientists to transplant a part of brain into a new body he reasons no matter how much we can find out about their brain activity or conscious experiences we will never know whether the resulting person is the same as before or somebody entirely new swinburne thus argues that we are immaterial souls sustained in existence by our brains sensations thoughts and intentions are conscious events in our souls that cause events in our brains while scientists might discover some of the laws of nature that determine conscious events and brain events each person s soul is an individual thing and this is what ultimately makes us who we are

we have all lived past lives all of us will live future ones what we do in this life will influence our lives to come as we evolve towards immortality in this new book the bestselling author of many lives many masters has not only regressed his patients into the past but also progressed them into the future he has discovered that our futures are variable the choices we make now will determine the quality of our life when we return for the first time dr brian weiss takes patients into the future in a responsible healing way using dozens of case histories dr weiss demonstrates the therapeutic benefits of progression therapy to bring patients more peace joy and healing just as he has shown that journeys into our past lives can cure physical or emotional wounds in the present
