The experience underscored the need to incorporate aspects like Technological literacy, Effective use of communication technologies, satellite phones, emergency apps during emergencies, Community engagement, Understanding community response plans and participating in preparedness initiatives, Mental health preparedness, Recognizing and addressing the psychological impacts of disaster, Industry Trends, Shaping the Future of Emergency Preparedness. Several industry trends are reshaping how we approach emergencies directly impacting the content of the merit badge: Increased reliance on technology, Smartphones, GPS devices, and citizen science platforms are becoming integral parts of disaster response; Focus on resilience, Shifting from simply reacting to disasters to proactively building community resilience through mitigation and adaptation strategies; Emphasis on cybersecurity, Protecting personal data and critical infrastructure from cyberattacks, especially during emergencies; Integration of climate change considerations, Understanding the increased frequency and intensity of extreme weather events and planning accordingly. Integrating These Trends into the Merit Badge: A revised Emergency Preparedness merit badge should incorporate these trends through Practical exercises using modern technology, Scouts could learn to utilize emergency apps, satellite communication tools, and GPS navigation in simulated emergency scenarios; Community engagement projects, Participating in local disaster drills, organizing neighborhood preparedness initiatives, and contributing to community resource mapping; Cybersecurity awareness training, Learning about phishing, scams, social engineering, and protecting online accounts during emergencies; Climate change adaptation planning, Understanding the risks posed by climate change in their specific geographic location and developing personal and community adaptation strategies. 3 Mental health awareness, Learning about the psychological impacts of disaster and strategies for self-care and community support. Expert Insight: The Boy Scouts have a unique opportunity to shape the next generation of disaster-prepared citizens, says Mark Johnson, a leading expert in disaster psychology. By incorporating these modern considerations, they can empower Scouts not just to survive emergencies but to thrive in the face of adversity. Call to Action: The BSA has the opportunity to significantly enhance the Emergency Preparedness merit badge, transforming it from a basic survival skills course to a comprehensive program equipping Scouts for the multifaceted challenges of the 21st century. This requires a collaboration between the BSA emergency management professionals, technology experts, and mental health specialists to develop a curriculum that is both relevant and engaging. Let's work together to empower the next generation of resilient leaders. 5
