this dissertation presents a case study of a partnership between a women s prison and a not for profit social services agency in the establishment of a therapeutic community inside a prison for women inmates reporting a history of domestic violence and sexual abuse the dissertation develops a typology of organizational structures and behaviors based on the work of dilulio and mcgregor that predicts that prisons characterized by an orientation toward hierarchy formality and security will be less well equipped to interact with and manage the work of external agencies characterized by flat structure informality and openness this typology is used to analyze the prison and agency as organizations and to analyze their interactions in the course of setting up the program the study shows how program implementation was affected by the respective organizations failure to recognize and harmonize their differences in structure mission and approach to dealing with inmates and discusses the organizational lessons learned the study makes recommendations regarding organizational issues that should be addressed when prisons outsource internal functions to outside organizations the time has come to brush the dust off research writing pedagogy and reimagine it into the twenty first century classroom with fresh approaches that breathe life into both the papers themselves and the instruction that supports them
