first published in 1987 to writers and visualizers this study sets a range of expectations for comprehension and miscomprehension pointing the finger of caution that even what seems the simplest of language can be misunderstood but also calling forth their best efforts because this benchmark study shows that some communications can be much more successful than others and there is usually room for improvement to advertisers the study says that perhaps we often take comprehension too much for granted being satisfied when consumers respond with something in the general area of our message rather than in the precise area of what is meant to academicians the study gives reliable reference points for thought and dialogue among themselves and the advertising and publishing communities it underlines what intuitive editors and writers have always known but have not always practiced that words and ideas are fragile handle with care if you hope to deliver them intact from one mind to another

This book argues that communication is at the heart of all approaches to dementia care and is an in-depth exploration of ways of establishing and developing communication with people with dementia. It examines both the nature of dementia as a condition and the subjective experience of those affected. The authors consider in detail how communication between people with dementia and those who care for them changes and how it can be maintained and enhanced. They include a significant amount of material quoted from people with dementia and suggest ways of interpreting their words and actions. We learn about what it might be like to have dementia and what sort of help is needed by people in this situation. Throughout the book, the authors address the ethical issues and the implications for practice. The combination of creativity and critical analysis, which the joint authors, a poet and a psychologist, bring to this book, is especially productive. The interweaving of substantial practice examples based on conversations with people with dementia give persuasive authority to the careful exposition and detailed analysis. The book is much more than an exhortation to carers about how they should communicate it challenges them to understand themselves and shows how they might use themselves to engage with people with dementia faith gibson emeritus professor of social work communication and the care of people with dementia is a key resource for students and professionals in health and social care work including those in such fields as social work nursing occupational therapy speech therapy physiotherapy clinical psychology geriatric medicine and the management of services
