the proliferation of environmental agreements is a defining feature of modern international relations that has attracted considerable academic attention the cooperation literature focuses on stories of policy creation and ignores issue areas where policy agreements are absent science and international environmental policy introduces nonregimes into the study of global governance and compares successes with failures in the formation of environmental treaties by exploring collective decisions not to cooperate it explains why international institutions form but also why when and how they do not emerge the book is a structured comparison of global policy responses to four ecological problems deforestation coral reefs degradation ozone depletion and acid rain it explores the connection between knowledge and action in world politics by investigating the role of scientific information in environmental management the study shows that different types of expert information play uneven roles in policymaking extensive analysis of multilateral scientific assessments participatory observation of negotiations and interviews with policymakers and scientists reveal that some kinds of information are critical requirements for policy creation while other types are less influential moreover the state of knowledge on ecological problems is not a function of sociopolitical power by disaggregating the concept of knowledge the book solves contradictions in previous theoretical work and offers a compelling account of the interplay between knowledge interests and power in global environmental politics all serious environmental threats are now international in scope and more than one thousand international environmental agreements already exist yet the prospects for international cooperation leading to the management of impacts on the planet remain grim the global environment meets the need for an authoritative assessment of the state of international environmental institutions laws and policies at the end of the 20th century the book examines disagreements over the meaning of sustainable development problems inherent in implementing environmental policies and the conflict over the exclusion of developing countries from the kyoto protocol it discusses the profound trade offs that may be required the role of international financial interests in promoting incompatible forms of development and analyses international environmental institutions law and policy and sustainable development
