This book outlines the basic structure and processes of family medicine residency education programs. Family medicine residency programs are complex adaptive learning organizations that involve people, processes, procedures, buildings, budgets, high stakes, mistakes, mission statements, strategies, schedules, curricula. Faculty and residents in residency programs are faced with many challenges, and this book gives them and others who are interested or involved in residency programs a clear and comprehensive breakdown of family medicine graduate medical education. The volume opens with detailed overviews of several family medicine organizations that support residency programs, and faculty. Subsequent chapters cover a range of topics including best practices in resident assessment and evaluation and best practices pertinent to the development of teaching and administrative skills for faculty. Furthermore, chapters explain necessary residency education accreditation requirements, which includes the understanding of the accreditation requirements, board certification requirements, Medicare graduate medical education funding policies, and centers for Medicare and Medicaid services, CMEs, billing regulations. All authors have been family medicine residency program directors or faculty or have been intimately involved in residency program education. Graduate medical education in family medicine offers residency program directors, faculty, and residency administrators a wide-ranging and comprehensive overview of family medicine residency education as well as specific administrative and educational best practices for residency education. This book will also be useful to those physicians with experience in their clinical field but not in educational pedagogy and andragogy.

This book shines a light on the practices and professional identities of translators in nineteenth-century France, speaking to the translatorial turn in translation studies, which spotlights translators as active agents in the international circulation of texts. The volume charts the sociocultural, legal, and economic developments which paved the way for the development of the professional translation industry in France in the period following the French Revolution through to the First World War, drawing on archival material from French publishers' institutional archives and translators' own discourses, and applying historiographical methodologies. Pickford explores the working conditions of professional translators during this time and the subsequent professional identities which emerged from the collective practice of translation across publishing business and government in its diachronic approach to translators practices and identities the book aims to recover the collective contributions of these translators and in turn paves the way for a new approach to translator history from below the volume will appeal to students and scholars in translation studies particularly those with an interest in literary translation translation history and translator practices
