carnal knowledge is an outcome of the renewed energy and interest in moving beyond the discursive construction of reality to understand the relationship between what is conceived of as reality and materiality described as the material turn it draws together established and emerging writers whose research spans dance music film fashion design photography literature painting and stereo immersive vr to demonstrate how art allows us to map the complex relations between nature and culture between the body language and knowledge these writings are unique in the field because they represent the authors commitment to a new materialism through the creative arts the questions they address include does the material turn in the creative arts take a different turn from continental epistemology philosophy and the humanities how does the agency of matter the material nature of artistic practice and the notion of truth to materials affect what we understand as the new materialism in engaging with these questions the book offers perspectives on the emergence of this exciting fresh field of new materialism in this groundbreaking volume theologians and scholars of religion criticize and refine new materialist views to advance debate about the role of religious experience in social and political change leading cultural and political theorists argue that any account of experience agency and political action demands attention to the urgent issues of our own material existence and environment as humanity continues to consume planetary resources at an unsustainable rate we require not only new and renewable forms of energy but also new ways of understanding energy itself clayton crockett offers an innovative philosophy of energy that cuts across a number of leading edge disciplines drawing from contemporary philosophies of new materialism non western traditions and the sciences he develops a comprehensive vision of energy as a material process spanning physics biology politics ecology and religion crockett argues that change is foundational to material reality which is ceaselessly self organizing we can observe energy s effects in the operations of natural selection as well as those at work in human societies matter and energy are not an oppositional binary rather they are expressions of how change functions in the universe ultimately crockett argues we can conceive of god neither as a deity nor as a being but as the principle of change informed by cutting edge theoretical discourses in thermodynamics science studies energy humanities systems theory continental philosophy and radical theology energy and change draws on theorists such as gilles deleuze catherine malabou slavoj Žižek karen barad bruno latour and kojim karatani as well as ideas about spirituality society and nature from amerindian vodou and neo confucian traditions a foundational work in new materialist philosophy of religion this book offers compelling new insights into the structure of the cosmos and our place in it this cumulative work brings together a range of research communities to contextualize and archive over a decade of work in new materialist theorising and knowledge making practice combining a reflective genealogical approach along with productive avenues for future research this volume is an essential collection for the field of new and feminist materialism the collection uses the new materialist movements in thought of changing intersecting practicing and transforming as methods these movements have engendered the metaphysical questions that different new and feminist materialist practices engage the volume follows these four movements for genealogical interdisciplinary arts based and politics orienting research in four parts each of which is preceded by an introductory framing essay rosi braidotti's preface provides revelatory mappings to bring the book together and curated panels further offer co authored texts which practise the collective nature of academic thinking advocated by the feminist new materialisms network this book offers a new materialist thesis that focuses on the dynamic biological core of humans shared with other animals and the rest of the natural world to develop a radical theory of human rights it therefore makes a unique contribution to literature and to academic and societal debates both on new materialisms and on human rights many on the political far right deride the concept of a human right this has occurred in tandem with a growing contempt for the rule of law and for obligations to protect land or the environment to recognize the rights of minorities or even to respect the various mechanisms of democracy on the other hand contemporary left wing inspired literature has also rejected the concept of a human right as enlightenment inspired and western this has gone hand in hand with a contestation of essentialism and universalism these theoretical positions have been variously critiqued as racist sexist as well as eurocentric drawing on metaphysics and ethics with protagonists drawn from traditions across analytic and continental philosophy and feminist theory assiter challenges these critics to form a distinctive new materialist position most people defenders and critics take for granted that the concept of human rights and the universal view of humanity derive from the european enlightenment however this book develops a different story of its origin from the earlier period of both aristotle and the zoroastrian persian empire and locates the concept of a right partly in our biological core yet challenges the assumption that this is constructed by language of any kind specifically including scientific discourse bringing together authors from two intellectual traditions that have so far generally developed independently of one another critical theory and new materialism this book addresses the fundamental differences and potential connections that exist between these two schools of thought with a focus on some of the most pressing questions of contemporary philosophy and social theory in particular those concerning the status of long standing and contested separations between matter and life the biological and the symbolic passivity and agency affectivity and rationality it shows that recent developments in both traditions point to important convergences between them and thus prepare the ground for a more direct confrontation and cross fertilization the first volume to promote a dialogue between critical theory and new materialism this collection explores the implications for contemporary debates on ecology gender biopolitics post humanism economics and aesthetics as such it will appeal to philosophers social and political theorists and sociologists with interests in contemporary critical theory and materialism

new materialism challenges the mechanistic models characteristic of early modern philosophy that regarded matter as largely passive and inert instead it gives weight to topics often overlooked in such accounts agency vitalism complexity contingency and self organization this collection which includes an international roster of contributors from philosophy history literature and science is the first to ask what is new about the new materialism and place it in interdisciplinary perspective against current theories of new materialism it argues for a deeper engagement with materialism's history questions whether matter can be lively and asks whether new materialism's wish to revitalize politics and the political lives up to its promise contributors keith ansell pearson sarah ellenzweig christian j emden n katherine hayles jess keiser mogens laerke ian lowrie lenny moss angela willey catherine wilson charles t wolfe derek woods and john h zammito karl marx is the most historically foundational and systematic critic of capitalism to date and the years since the 2008 financial crisis have witnessed a rebirth of his popular appeal in a world of rising income inequality right wing nationalisms and global climate change people are again looking to the father of modern socialism for answers as this book argues every era since marx's death has reinvented him to fit its needs there is not one marx forever and for all time there are a thousand marxes as thomas nail contends one of the most significant contributions of marx's work is that it treats theory itself as a historical practice reading marx is not just an interpretative activity but a creative one as our historical conditions change so do the kinds of questions we pose and the kinds of answers we find in marx's writing this book is a return to the writings of karl marx including his under appreciated dissertation through the lens of the pressing philosophical and political problems of our time ecological crisis gender inequality colonialism and global mobility however the aim of this book is not to make marxism relevant by applying it to contemporary issues instead marx in motion the first new materialist interpretation of marx's work treats capital as if it were already a response to the present thomas nail argues that marx was a new materialist avant la lettre he argues that marx did not believe history was determined or that matter was passive or that humans were separate or superior to nature marx did not even have a labor theory of value marxists argue that new materialists lack a sufficient political and economic theory and new materialists argue that marx's materialism is human centric and mechanistic this book aims to solve both problems by proposing a new materialist marxism

the essays in this volume discuss the various approaches to new materialism in sociology and philosophy they raise the questions of what new materialism consists of and whether it in fact should be considered a radical change in social theory are the ideas of a material turn as the theory is formulated and in its assumptions foreshadowed by the classical philosophies of spinoza and tarde do these new approaches bring substantially new perspectives to social theory a further goal of these essays is to formulate the methodological and methodical consequences for its empirical implementation what conditions must an ethnography of things fulfill if it is to be sufficient which participant objects and bodies do the approaches of the various social theories and methodologies include or exclude examines the theoretical achievements and the political impact of the new materialisms materialism a rich philosophical tradition that goes back to antiquity is currently undergoing a renaissance in the government of things thomas lemke provides a comprehensive overview and critical assessment of this new materialism in analyzing the work of graham harman jane bennett and karen barad lemke articulates what exactly new materialism is and how it has evolved these insights open up new spaces for critical thought and political experimentation overcoming the limits of anthropocentrism drawing on michel foucault s concept of a government of things the book also goes beyond new materialist scholarship which tends to displace political questions by ethical and aesthetic concerns it puts forward a relational and performative account of materialities that more closely attends to the interplay of epistemological ontological and political issues lemke provides definitive and much needed clarity about the fascinating potential and limitations of new materialism as a whole the government of things revisits foucault s more than human understanding of government to capture a new constellation of power environmentality as the book demonstrates contemporary modes of government seek to control the social ecological and technological conditions of life rather than directly targeting individuals and populations the book offers an essential and much needed tool to critically examine this political shift new materialism has emerged over the past 20 years as an approach concerned fundamentally with the material workings of power but focused firmly upon social production rather than social construction applied to empirical research radically extends traditional materialist analysis beyond traditional concerns with structural and macro level social phenomena addressing issues of how desires feelings and meanings also contribute to social production new materialism is currently having a profound effect across disciplines rooted in post marxist thinking but spreading out on the flat ontology of networks objects and bodies new materialism is an interdisciplinary discussion on the properties of matter in terms of agency ethical responsibility and immanence along with post humanism the anthropocene nonrepresentational theories and post deleuzian thought new materialism asks us to reconsider the nature of the human and the non human the difference between actual and virtual the emergence of politics and law in the face of ubiquitous materiality and above all the new responsibilities that come with it all sociology and the new materialism theory research action discusses issues of research design and methods in new materialist social inquiry an approach that is attracting increasing interest across the social sciences as an alternative to either realist or constructionist ontologies new materialism de privileges human agency focusing instead upon how assemblages of the animate and inanimate together produce the world with fundamental implications for social inquiry methodology and methods conversely new materialism takes matter as a lively and active participant in social life problematises core hierarchical binaries such as human nonhuman living non living and idealism materialism and expands the remit of what constitutes social life questioning these binaries renders humans as part of a flatter ontology than we might normally think this book also considers how core social concerns of responsibility and sustainability might be transformed when we pay attention to the forces and capacities of materialities art of the real is devoted to registering the materialist turn of contemporary theory in visual studies for many years visual studies was dominated by post structuralist theory and its attendant nominalism more recently however the materialism of slavoj Å1 2iÅ3 4ek the realism of gilles deleuze especially as imputed by manuel de landa and alain badiou has disrupted this status quo today we are more likely to take for granted the relevance of biology and the natural sciences while the return of marx has been more serious than countenanced by derrida or foucault this book considers visual studies and the questions that have led to the new materialism its ontology and its relation to contemporary politics while a good deal of work has promoted a materialist agenda at the same time that scholars in art history and visual studies have felt liberated by the call to attend to objects materials and â oemateriality â no publication has yet treated this move for its meta theoretical commitments this volume does this by addressing the conditions that have brought about the turn to materiality the ontological commitments that follow on from new materialist metaphysics and the political implications wrought by these commitments this book argues that identified weaknesses in recent theological engagement with new materialism can be successfully addressed by incorporating insights from relational christian realism central themes are those of the relational and the apophatic as they represent different but essential strands of a materialist theology the relational refers to the work of deleuze and its influence upon key new materialist thinkers such as de landa bryant and braidotti but supplemented from relational christian realism by latour and badiou and with reference to the concept of the apophatic as found in keller and kearney examining the concepts of transcendence human agency and a new enlightenment the book moves into more practical areas of aesthetics and technology concluding with a response to the contemporary apocalyptic of climate change being beyond in the midst requires developing spaces of faithful dissent and holding the tension between the relational and the apophatic in theology where are you from this question often refers to someone's birthplace childhood home or a place that holds significance the location that is offered in response to this question is more than a means of orientation it is a lived place that has complex meanings that identify are learned and made yet the significance of place to our lives is often overlooked it is key to understanding who we are and how we are both individually and collectively through embodied and material practice research underpinned with theories of new materialism tara page enables us to learn and understand how our ways of knowing making and learning place are entangled with embodied and material pedagogies she shows how our bodily engagements in and with the material world are intra actions of the who with the where the creative and multi dimensional approach of this book with links to photographs creative practices to be read with the text brings together the global with the local practice with theory and demonstrates the complex pedagogy between bodies places and everyday social relations of power page reveals that placemaking is the very experiential fact of our existence but is also a necessary one for the editors of this collection new materialisms have always been the entanglement of epistemology ontology ethics and politics looking back to the notion of situated knowledges haraway 1988 that among others planted the seed for feminist new materialism van der tuin 2015 26 one sees how those at least four planes are entangled rogowska stangret 2018 in order to bring forth response able haraway 2008 research new materialism is thus an ethico onto epistemological framework barad 2007 revelles benavente 2018 that by activating its ethico politics helps to diagnose infer and transform gendered environmental anthropocentric social injustices from a multidimensional angle social injustices are a driving motivation to pursue research and are the reason why the editors and authors of this special issue cannot understand new materialism without feminism in the lines of eds hinton teusch 2015 contemporary feminist researchers are providing new materialisms with a transversal approach yuval davis 1997 that comes from many different disciplines without canonizing back again knowledge creation and production and in hope that they will not enter back into classifixations van der tuin 2015 it is situated haraway 1988 research response able haraway 2008 to material discursive practices that iterate in a dynamic conceptualization of matter
