we live in an age of media saturation where with a few clicks of the remote or mouse we can tune in to programming where the facts fit our ideological predispositions but what are the political consequences of this vast landscape of media choice partisan news has been roundly castigated for reinforcing prior beliefs and contributing to the highly polarized political environment we have today but there is little evidence to support this claim and much of what we know about the impact of news media come from studies that were conducted at a time when viewers chose from among six channels rather than scores through a series of innovative experiments kevin arceneaux and martin johnson show that such criticism is unfounded americans who watch cable news are already polarized and their exposure to partisan programming of their choice has little influence on their political positions in fact the opposite is true viewers become more polarized when forced to watch programming that opposes their beliefs a much more troubling consequence of the ever expanding media environment the authors show is that it has allowed people to tune out the news the four top rated partisan news programs draw a mere three percent of the total number of people watching television overturning much of the conventional wisdom changing minds or changing channels demonstrate that the strong effects of media exposure found in past research are simply not applicable in today s more saturated media landscape loomis observed the politics of policymaking in kansas from may 1988 through may 1989 using specific examples he shows how deadlines occur in regular predictable patterns in the development of issues in subsequent policy decisions and explains how they ultimately narrow the choices presented to any legislative body thesis m a from the year 2009 in the subject orientalism sinology chinese china grade 2 0 university of heidelberg institut für sinologie language english abstract this work tries to answer these questions by analyzing china s changing policy on the principle of national sovereignty and international military intervention especially since the end of the cold war era the result is of course a much more complex picture than the one painted by the western media beijing s interpretation of national sovereignty is by no means static despite all its conservative rhetoric in addition china has increasingly acquiesced to some forms of international military intervention while continuing to oppose it in certain cases although there are some visible red lines there seems to be no ideologically driven chinese strategy on international intervention beijing rather seems to follow a pragmatic approach of muddling through mosuo 摸索 testing a number of different approaches in order to find the best possible way to promote its interests this thesis is structured as follows chapter 2 provides an analysis of the general development of chinese foreign policy since the end of the cold war era this chapter focuses especially on the issues and motivations that have dominated chinese foreign policy in the past twenty years it starts with a brief analysis of the chinese foreign policy decision making process and of the chinese foreign policy think tank landscape chapter 3 looks into china s changing position on the principle of national sovereignty the chapter also discusses the historical development of the principle of national sovereignty and the factors constraining and conducting change in the chinese position towards it chapter 4 examines beijing s changing approach to international intervention to illustrate this approach two concepts of international military intervention will be examined un peacekeeping operations and a new concept the responsibility to protect the analysis of china s position on these concepts will employ a mix of discourse analysis comprising official statements and unofficial foreign policy elite views
