everywhere people share certain moral principles it is bad to steal to kill to lie we see our morality as absolute yet we live by rules that differ with the context it is ok to kill the enemy in war for a businessman to do the best for himself for a lawyer to argue professionally for a position he would personally reject we are constantly bending the rules while considering our moral principles as absolute robert hinde the eminent cambridge biologist and psychologist presents a new approach to morality based on combining an evolutionary approach with observations on how people actually behave to show that morality is more subtle than it appears the complexity of modern societies requires the rules to be somewhat flexible according to the context personal relationships science law business politics and war some bending of rules is necessary for social cohesion but too much is destructive hinde argues from a humanistic standpoint for a deeper appreciation of the nature of morality so that we may avoid global catastrophe and strive for a more ethical just and peaceful world
