this book was written to remember my uncle private first class melvin w dunn he was a member of general george patton s 3rd army 5th infantry division and the 10th regiment in world war ii he was killed during the ardennes offensive better known as the battle of the bulge on january 28 1945 through some luck and research i have been able to find a few men who fought with him in the 10th regiment they have told me of their memories of the war and of the men with whom they fought the men are all in their eighties and nineties with fading memories of a war sixty plus years ago some memories however have not gone away and are quite vivid the war was an important part of their lives and something they can never completely forget i don t think many today understand the war and how much of the world was affected at least fifty million people lost their life because of the war the destruction of property was tremendous and it was years before reconstruction was completed in the war torn countries it was impossible for life to return to normal in europe the american soldiers returned home but were changed and for many it took years before the war left their daily thoughts we owe a huge debt to those who served in the war and they deserve to be given our appreciation with rockets firing and trumpets playing a young soldier s memoirs of fighting in wwii fascinating a personal record like this is a valuable resource to anyone interested in the period military model scene after the citadel and officer candidate school andrew z adkins jr was sent to the 80th infantry division then training in the california arizona desert there he was assigned as an 81mm mortar section leader in company h 2nd battalion 317th infantry regiment when the division completed training in december 1943 it was shipped in stages to the united kingdom and then normandy where it landed on august 3 1944 lieutenant adkins and his fellow soldiers took part in light hedgerow fighting that served to shake the division down and familiarize the troops and their officers with combat the first real test came within weeks when the 2nd battalion 317th infantry attacked high ground near argentan during the drive to seal german forces in the falaise pocket while scouting for mortar positions in the woods adkins met a group of germans and shot one of them dead with his carbine this baptism in blood settled the question faced by every novice combatant he was cool under fire capable of killing when facing the enemy he later wrote it was a sickening sight but having been caught up in the heat of battle i didn't have a reaction other than feeling i had saved my own life thereafter the 2nd battalion 317th infantry took part in bloody battles across france sometimes coping with inept leadership and grievous losses even as it took hills and towns away from the germans in the fighting graphically portrayed here adkins acted with skill and courage placing himself at the forefront of the action whenever he could his extremely aggressive delivery of critical supplies to a cut off unit in an embattled french town earned him a bronze star the first in his battalion this is a story of a young soldier at war a junior officer's coming of age amid pulse pounding combat before his death andy adkins was able to face his memory of war as bravely as he faced war itself he put it on paper honest and unflinching in 1944-45 he did his duty to his men and country and here he serves new generations of military and civilian readers the involuntary soldiers of an unmilitary people such were the forces that american military planners had to pit against hardened axis veterans yet prewar unpreparedness dictated that whole divisions of such men would go to war under the supervision of tiny professional cadres much to his surprise and delight army chief of staff general george c marshall found that the 88th infantry division his first draftee division fought like wildcats and readily outclassed its german adversaries while measuring up to the best regular army divisions draftee division is at once a history of the 88th division an analysis of american unit mobilization during world war ii and an insight into the savage italian campaign after an introduction placing the division in historical context separate chapters address personnel training logistics and overseas deployment another chapter focuses upon preliminary adjustments to the realities of combat after which two chapters trace the 88th s climactic drive through the gustav line into rome itself a final chapter takes the veteran 88th to final victory of particular interest are observations concerning differences connected with mobilization between the 88th and less successful divisions and discussions of the contemporary relevance of the 88th s experiences draftee division is especially rich in its sources john sloan brown with close ties to the division has secured extensive and candid contributions from veterans to these he has added a full array of archival and secondary sources the result is a definitive study of american cadremen creating a division out of raw draftees and leading them on to creditable victories its findings will be important for military and social historians and for students of defense policy
