this book explains how and why european non governmental development organisations ngdos engage in advocacy towards the european union eu it analyses the heterogenous structure of the sector with examples ranging from large multinational networks to essentially single person ngdos the book provides a detailed map of the topics which have featured in ngdo advocacy since 2006 arguing that ngdos have generally been reactive in their advocacy towards the eu the author explains how they have contested a number of policy issues on the agendas of the eu institutions especially around the diversion of aid to manage migration and leverage private sector investments furthermore some ngdos have used the covid 19 pandemic as an opportunity to re package their pre existing policy demands based on an analytical framework focused around three variables namely moral vision funding concerns and the need to build and maintain a good reputation the book explains these advocacy choices and argues that much of ngo advocacy seems to be consistent with funding motivations the author highlights the importance of moral vision and reputational concerns in moderating how far ngdos will go with funding driven advocacy arguing that motivations need to be looked at in their complexity and within the specific policy context drawing on a range of quantitative and qualitative data sets to provide a rich and varied picture of the advocacy work of european development ngos european civil society and international development aid is a key reference for researchers and practitioners working in the field this thought provoking book conceptualizes the importance of civil society and citizenship in building a sustainable and participatory democracy it considers the ways in which networks and organizations promoting common interests contribute to this mediating space between the public and private spheres examining the impacts of the diversity of values and attitudes held by these organizations taking a normative position thomas p boje argues for the importance of social justice and civility in an active liberating equitable and participatory society this book concludes with a detailed discussion of the conditions required for a participatory democratic system in which all citizens are involved in the planning decision making and implementation of crucial decisions this book seeks to make accessible a selection of the best pieces written on civil society and brings together theoretical and empirical material the essays discuss the theory of civil society civil society in south asia in particular and ways of strengthening civil society

publisher description

the book investigates the intersection of citizenship civil society and development in today's global world the multi disciplinary collection considers the notion of citizenship in connection with the neoliberal development agendas participation security discourses and legal environments the contributions analyse the development citizenship nexus grounded in empirical work in african latin american european and global contexts the book opens exciting avenues to reflect on the notion of citizenship and explores the following pertinent questions does citizenship matter for development research do international development policy and practice promote certain normative registers for how people should make sense of their social relations and in particular how they relate to public authorities what are their responses contributors from various academic backgrounds such as anthropology law and political science affirm the importance of citizenship for the study of contemporary development processes chapters provide empirical analysis of the processes of water privatization in ghana the promulgation of new ngo law in ethiopia environmental politics in former yugoslavia and the global interconnections between the arab spring and the occupy wall street movement the book is relevant for students and scholars of political science and development studies as well as development practitioners globally this book was published as a special issue of the journal of civil society as ernest gellner shows in this path breaking book the most significant difference between communism and other totalitarian ideologies and western liberalism is the existence of the civil society the intermediary institutions like trade unions political parties religions pressure groups and clubs which fill the gap between the family and the state under communism the civil society was suppressed in liberal democracy it thrives if life is to improve in eastern europe the civil society must be encouraged to grow and prosper the early signs as observed by the doyen of british social anthropology are good the contrast with militant islam is extraordinary while marxism as a faith has collapsed islam has been growing ever stronger in fundamentalist states like iran there is little civil society and apparently not much pressure for one either why is there so little resistance or opposition how can this be understood this is an extremely important book and a major contribution to the end of history debate by one of the most distinguished scholars working in europe today this comprehensive handbook examines the role of political opposition across different political systems contributors draw on a series of in depth case studies including specific chapters on country cases to explore the impact of opposition within democracies anocracies or hybrid regimes and autocracies this book is available as open access through the bloomsbury open access programme and is available on bloomsburycollections.com this book looks at the role that civil society organizations play in dealing with conflict and violence the authors argue that in most of the prevalent conceptualizations the conflict dimension of civil society is either downplayed or inadequately addressed they contend that the ability to deal with conflict is at the heart of organized civil society in the political process one of civil society's key functions is to express and mediate between different interests thus contributing to political decision making the chapters draw on detailed empirical data from the civicus civil society index a unique comparative data set drawn from 25 countries which has not previously been made publicly available it examines the different ways violence has been manifested in civil societies the meaning of violent protest and the impact of security legislation that might hinder the mediating efforts of civil society the book offers a sophisticated comparison between conflict and post conflict countries and an analysis of the role of civil society in conflict resolution reconciliation and transitional justice in the study of civil society and social movements most cases are based in western europe and north america these two areas of the world have similar histories and political ideals and structures in common which in turn affect the structure of its civil society in studying civil society in asia a different understanding of history politics and society is needed the region s long traditions of centralized authoritarian states buttressed by confucian and in some cases communist ideologies may render this concept irrelevant the chapters in this international volume cover most of the areas and countries traditionally defined as belonging to east asia japan taiwan south korea hong kong singapore and china the case studies included in this volume confront the utility of using the western concept of civil society represented in its most active form social movements to think about east asia popular politics along with providing an array of important case studies of social movements in east asia the introduction chapters and conclusion in the book take up three major theoretical questions the effect of the east asian cultural social and institutional context upon the mobilization activities and outcomes of social movements in that region the role of social movements in larger transformative processes utility of western social movement concepts in explaining social movements in east asia this book will be of interest to two major groups of readers those who study east asia and those who pursue social movements and civil society as well as politics more generally it is only a decade ago that the eighteenth century distinction between civil society and the state seemed old fashioned an object of cynicism even of outright hostility in this important new book john keane shows how in a wholly unexpected reversal of fortunes this antiquated distinction has since become voguish among politicians academics journalists business leaders relief agencies and citizens organizations john keane examines the various sources and phases of the dramatic world wide popularization of the term he traces its reappearance in a wide range of contexts from china to tunisia from south africa to the emerging european union and clarifies the conflicting grammars and vocabularies of the language of civil society considerable care is taken to highlight the different possible meanings of the distinction between civil society and the state keane also takes the reader into previously uncharted intellectual territory by demonstrating that the civil society perspective contains unharnessed potentials that it is possible to develop bold new images of civil society that alter the ways in which we think about matters such as power property violence politics publicity and democracy written with style and imagination this important book by john keane will be of great interest to students and scholars in politics media studies sociology social and political theory and to a broader public audience interested in the central debates and political developments of our time this publication focuses on the challenges faced by civil society to remain sustainable in response to major changes in the global political economic and social environment academics and practitioners from all over the world have contributed original articles practical notes and viewpoints which critically examine the ways in which civil society organisations are affected by and are responding to political and financial dynamics these include reductions in traditional external aid for civil society activities but also the growth of new forms of funding through social enterprise philanthropy fundraising and contractual relationships with national government the operating environment for civil society is a central theme with authors exploring the legitimacy and credibility of different types of civil society organisation as well as the effects of legislative and regulatory restrictions on their sustainability the contributions finally examine new opportunities for civil society and the prospects for organisations to emerge that are less dependent on foreign aid funding that are more embedded in local communities and that can bring about lasting and sustained social and economic change this book was originally published as a special issue of development in practice this book re conceptualizes civil society engagement with global governance institutions in the field of development in terms of opposition with an innovative theoretical framework it maps and explains opposition strategies through detailed case studies on the eu the asian development bank and the global forum on migration and development bringing together historians and political scientists this unique collaboration compares nineteenth century civil societies that failed to develop lasting democracies with civil societies that succeeded much of the current literature on the connection between civil society and consolidating democracy focuses exclusively on single contemporary polities that are ever changing and uncertain by studying historical cases the authors are able to demonstrate which civil societies developed in tandem with lasting democracies and which did not contrasting these two sets of cases the book both enlightens readers about individual countries and extracts lessons about the connections between civil society and democracy in contemporary times above all the authors ask the vital but under researched question ohow and why does democratic civil society develop o
