seminar paper from the year 2002 in the subject business economics offline marketing and online marketing grade 2 3 b maastricht university faculty of economics and business administration language english abstract when in the early 90s the internet became a mass medium the service industry recognized the potential of this new media quickly several online service providers like yahoo or aol were established these new internet companies tried to take advantage of being the first mover by acquiring new customers in the beginning this was fine since more and more people obtained access and became potential customers following a typical situation of excess demand and hence the established online service provider could afford to focus more on gaining new customers than on retaining existing ones however this picture turned completely the more popular the internet became and the more new start ups saw their opportunities to penetrate the e commerce arena this led to a shift from excess demand to excess supply in the online service industry consequently the situation of increased competition was followed by a loss of market share and lower profit margins and the strategy of steadily acquiring new customers became ever harder to pursue so that the companies had to rethink their in order to stay competitive the companies have to focus more on the retention of existing customers rather than on searching for new ones this situation is comparable to the offline service industry the offline service industry also experienced decades of prospering growth and now faces a situation of a saturated market the acquiring of new customers has become extremely difficult and costly and retaining existing ones has become harder and harder due to an increased customer willingness to switch the service provider with respect to today's rapidly changing economy it becomes increasingly important for managers in both the

offline and online service industry to explicitly identify the reasons that drive customers to switch their service provider additionally it is also extremely important for the online industry whether they can build on the experiences made in the offline service industry or whether these experiences and approaches are not valid in the internet world each of these facets will be illuminated focusing the analysis on the following core question is the customer switching behaviour substantially different in the online service industry as compared to the offline industry research paper postgraduate from the year 2008 in the subject communications public relations advertising marketing social media grade none dr m g r university course ph d language english abstract the current trend has been changing and it is becoming quite difficult to become and sustain as leader in the market mostly it is there in the hands of consumers to choose and make market leaders in that particular industry the consumers are becoming very choosy and take a hell lot of things into consideration before buying a product from the market the retailing sector is booming now and even the consumers are also seeking more information while purchasing the malls and big shopping centers are becoming crowded and people are willing to do the window shopping before purchasing there are several other behavioral issues relating to the consumer buying behavior infact it is increasingly becoming difficult to turn consumers into customers previously the aim of marketing is to meet and satisfy target customer s needs and wants but now it is much more beyond that it is customer delighting now at the same time the marketers also facing tough competition and they need to face many challenges yet understanding consumer behavior and knowing customers are never simple establishing brand loyalty is increasingly becoming difficult the customers at any time can go for other brands for any reason this paper highlights various issues or aspects that a consumer takes care during purchasing activity this paper deals with how consumers are choosing their brands and how intensive they are during pre purchase system this paper was also based on the research work done
