this book examines the ways in which the views of the public inhabit the counter terrorism policy space with a focus on the uk case drawing insights from critical terrorism studies critical security studies and studies of public opinion the book develops an argument that the relationship between public opinion is complex iterative and mutually instantiating rather than public opinion and counter terrorism policy existing in a simple uni directional causal relationship the book argues that whilst counter terrorism policy actors are informed by public opinion in important ways they also construct that very opinion this argument is made through an empirical analysis of uk counter terrorism policy drawing on primary research interviews with key counter terrorism policy actors and security professionals as well as original analysis of parliamentary debates the book demonstrates that rather than uk counter terrorism politics being closed and elite driven there exists a complex dialectical relationship between public opinion and both the making and the implementing of counter terrorism policy this book will be of much interest to students of critical terrorism studies counter terrorism security studies british politics and communication studies this thought provoking reader draws to 28 representative essays from major schools of thought on the forces that shape american foreign policy providing a basis for both the explanation and evaluation of that policy it includes four new essays tied to critical topics such as emerging democracies executive congressional relations civil military relations and foreign policy decisions being driven by business interests
