in the 1880s hong kong was a booming colonial entrepôt with many european especially british residents living in palatial mansions in the mid levels and at the peak but it was also a ruthless migrant city where chinese workers shared bedspaces in the crowded tenements of taipingshan despite persistent inequality hong kong never ceased to attract different classes of sojourners and immigrants who strived to advance their social standing by accumulating wealth especially through land and property speculation in this engaging and extensively illustrated book cecilia l chu retells the hong kong story by tracing the emergence of its speculative landscape from the late nineteenth to the early decades of the twentieth century through a number of pivotal case studies she highlights the contradictory logic of colonial urban development the encouragement of native investment that supported a laissez faire housing market versus the imperative to segregate the populations in a hierarchical colonial spatial order crucially she shows that the production of hong kong s urban landscapes was not a top down process but one that evolved through ongoing negotiations between different constituencies with vested interests in property further her study reveals that the built environment was key to generating and attaining individual and collective aspirations in a racially divided highly unequal but nevertheless upwardly mobile modernizing colonial city awarded 2023 best book in non north american urban history by the urban history association
