the material included in this book was first presented in a series of lectures delivered at the university of minnesota in june 1983 in connection with the conference thermodynamics and phase transitions this conference was one of the principal events in the first year of operation of the institute for mathematics and its applications lma at the university of minnesota the institute was founded under the auspices of the national science foundation of the united states and the university of minnesota and is devoted to strengthening and fostering the relation of mathematics with its various applications to problems of the real world the present volume constitutes an important element in the continuing publication program of the institute previous publications in this program have appeared as lecture notes in the well known Springer series and future ones will be part of a new series in volumes in applied mathematics preface until recently it was believed that thermodynamics could be given a rigorous foundation only in certain restricted circumstances particularly those involving reversible and quasi static processes more general situations commonly arising in continuum theories have therefore been treated on the assumption that internal energy entropy and absolute temperature are a priori given quantities or have been dealt with on a more or less ad hoc basis with emphasis for example on various types of variational formulations and maximization rules most youth who come in conflict with the law have experienced some form of trauma yet many justice professionals are ill equipped to deal with the effects trauma has on youth and instead reinforce a system that further traumatizes young offenders while ignoring the needs of victims by taking a trauma informed perspective this text provides a much needed alternative one that allows for interventions based on principles of healing and restorative justice rather than on punishment and risk assessment in addition to providing a comprehensive historical overview of youth justice in Canada Judah Oudshoorn addresses the context of youth offending by examining both individual trauma including its emotional cognitive and behavioural effects and collective trauma the author tackles some of the most difficult problems facing youth justice today especially the ongoing cycles of intergenerational trauma caused by the colonization of indigenous peoples and patriarchal violence and demonstrates how a trauma informed approach to youth justice can work toward preventing crime and healing offenders victims and communities featuring a foreword written by Howard Zehr case stories from the author's own work with victims and offenders questions for reflection and annotated lists of recommended readings this engaging text is the perfect resource for college and university students in the field of youth justice
