this collection is a comprehensive resource on conducting research in applied linguistics involving written genres that is distinctive in its coverage of a multiplicity of interdisciplinary perspectives the volume explores the central approaches methodologies analyses and tools used in conducting genre based research extending the traditional focus on a single framework for defining genres by explicating the major approaches that have been invoked in applied linguistics chapters address a mix of commonly used methodologies e.g. case studies, ethnographic approaches, types of analyses e.g. metadiscourse, rhetorical move, step analysis, multidimensional analysis, lexical bundles and phrase frames, calf measures, multimodal analysis and studies that focus on other areas of second language L2 teaching and learning e.g. multilingualism, the teaching and learning cycle. Taken together, the volume provides a theoretically and methodologically diverse introduction to foundational topics in genre-related research supported by detailed discussions of the challenges and practical considerations to take into account when conducting research involving written genres. This book is a valuable resource for graduate students, faculty and researchers in applied linguistics, particularly those working in second language acquisition, L2 writing and genre theory and pedagogy. Chapter 2 of this book is freely available as a downloadable open access pdf at taylorfrancis.com under a creative commons attribution non-commercial no derivatives cc-by-nc-nd 4.0 license.

The Fourth Gospel and the Manufacture of Minds in Ancient Historiography: Biography, Romance and Drama is the first book-length study of genre and character cognition in the Gospel of John, informed by traditions of ancient literary criticism and the emerging discipline of cognitive narratology. Tyler Smith argues that narrative genres have generalizable patterns for representing cognitive material and that this has profound implications for how readers make sense of cognitive content woven into the narratives they encounter. After investigating conventions for representing cognition in ancient historiography, biography, romance and drama, Smith offers an original account of how these conventions illuminate the Johannine narrative's enigmatic cognitive dimension: a rich tapestry of love and hate, belief and disbelief, recognition and misrecognition, understanding and misunderstanding, knowledge and ignorance, desire and motivation.

Similarities and differences between speech and writing have been the subject of innumerable studies, but until now there has been no attempt to provide a unified linguistic analysis of the whole range of spoken and written registers in English. In this widely acclaimed empirical study, Douglas Biber uses computational techniques to analyse the linguistic characteristics of twenty-three spoken and written genres, enabling identification of the basic underlying dimensions of variation in English. In variation across speech and writing, six dimensions of variation are identified through a factor analysis on the basis of linguistic co-occurrence patterns. The resulting model of variation provides for the description of the distinctive linguistic characteristics of any spoken or written text and demonstrates the ways in which the polarization of speech and writing has been misleading and thus enables reconciliation of the contradictory conclusions reached in previous research.

This volume explores the dynamics of genre conventions in historical English news discourse. The contributions cover a wide spectrum of news writing and publication formats from corantos to modern tabloids, from prototypical hard news stories and crime reports to more specialised genres such as medical and scientific news advertisements death notices and spoof news investigating linguistic pragmatic and social factors the authors trace the triggers mechanisms and agents of change that have shaped genre conventions in historical news discourse from the 17th century to the present day
