a chronicle of a woman's life told first through Freud's letters then through a case history of her analysis and finally through conventional narrative

Cowart presents a study of international historical fiction since World War II with reflections on the affinities between historical and fictional narrative analysis of the basic modes of historical fiction and readings of a number of historical novels including John Barth's The Sot-Weed Factor Marguerite Yourcenar's Memoirs of Hadrian Russell Hoban's Riddley Walker Margaret Atwood's The Handmaid's Tale Giuseppe Tomasi di Lampedusa's The Leopard D. M. Thomas's The White Hotel William Faulkner's Go Down Moses and Umberto Eco's The Name of the Rose He proposes recognizing four modes of the historical novel: the past as a distant mirror of the present fictions whose authors seek to pinpoint the precise historical moment when the modern age or some prominent feature of it came into existence fictions whose authors aspire purely or largely to historical verisimilitude and fictions whose authors reverse history to contemplate utopia and dystopia in the future thus historical fiction can be organized under the rubrics the distant mirror the turning point the way it was and the way it will be this fourfold schema and his focus on postwar novels set Cowart's work apart from previous studies which have not devoted adequate space to the contemporary historical novel Cowart argues that postwar historical fiction merits more extensive treatment because it is the product of an age unique in the annals of history an age in which history itself may end

In this illuminating study Marilyn Randall takes on the question of why some cases of literary repetition become great art while others are relegated to the ignominy of plagiarism her discussion reveals that plagiarism is not the objective textual fact it is often taken for but a phenomenon governed by the norms and conventions of literary reception Randall turns her focus on the critical debates surrounding cases of perceived plagiarism charting the progress of plagiarism in the history of western letters her study ranges over centuries from the notion s first appearance in roman times to contemporary disputes about intellectual property randall considers the development of copyright law and the notion of authorship presents a wide range of texts and draws aptly on foucault s notion of the discursive construction of authorship just as foucault studied insanity to find out what was meant by sanity says randall so the study of plagiarism can reveal what was meant by the term literary at various cultural moments she shows that perceived instances of plagiarism are aspects of an ongoing power struggle in the literary field and as she reveals it is not the plagiarist but the accuser who is most concerned with achieving profit and power
