Interaction with the Forest	Sorchas Emotional/Physical Response	Symbolic Interpretation	Realworld Parallel
Initial fear and alienation	Anxiety sense of being overwhelmed	Unfamiliarity with natural forces	fear of the unknown
Human detachment from nature	fear of wilderness	Gradual acceptance and understanding	Peace comfort strength

Active participation	healing defense	Confidence empowerment	Mastery of natural skills becoming part of the ecosystem	Environmental stewardship	active conservation	II Human/Nature Dichotomy and its Consequences

The novel starkly contrasts the civilized world with the untamed wilderness The human settlements represent order and control often achieved through the exploitation of nature while the forest represents chaos and untamed power yet also profound beauty and resilience This dichotomy is reflected in the conflict between Sorchas human society and the Sidhe a supernatural race intrinsically connected to the forest This can be visualized through a simple bar graph
