2 Network Database Management Systems Allows complex relationships between data elements with multiple parentchild connections

4 Describe the different database models Answer Understanding these models is crucial for efficient data storage and retrieval Relational Model Data organized into tables with rows tuples and columns attributes connected through primary and foreign keys Hierarchical Model Data structured as a tree with a root node at the top and branches representing relationships Network Model More complex than hierarchical allowing multiple parentchild relationships between entities EntityRelationship ER Model A visual representation of data entities and their relationships often used in database design

5 What is a schema in DBMS Answer A schema defines the structure of a database specifying the tables columns data types and relationships Think of it as the blueprint for your database

6 Explain the difference between a primary key and a foreign key Answer Primary Key Uniquely identifies each record in a table ensuring data integrity It cant contain null values Foreign Key References a primary key in another table

8 What are ACID properties in DBMS

3 Answer These properties ensure data consistency and reliability in transactions

Atomicity An entire transaction either completes successfully or fails completely

Consistency Transactions maintain data integrity ensuring data remains valid after the transaction

Isolation Concurrent transactions don't interfere with each other maintaining data separation

Durability Once a transaction completes successfully the changes are permanently stored

Tackling the Technicalities Now let's delve into some more technical aspects of DBMS These questions test your grasp of specific concepts and technologies

9 Explain the concept of normalization in DBMS

Answer Normalization is a process of organizing database tables to reduce data redundancy and improve data integrity It involves breaking down tables into smaller more manageable entities following specific normal forms

10 What are the different types of joins in SQL

Answer Joins combine data from multiple tables based on related columns

Inner Join Returns only rows that have matching values in both tables

Full Join Returns all rows from both tables regardless of matching values

11 What are the advantages and disadvantages of using indexes in a database

Answer Advantages Faster data retrieval Improves performance of queries

Disadvantages Increased storage space Can slow down data insertion and updates

12 What is a database transaction

Answer A transaction is a logical unit of work that consists of a sequence of operations performed on the database It ensures data integrity and atomicity

13 Explain the difference between a stored procedure and a function in DBMS

4 Answer Stored procedure A group of SQL statements stored in the database executed as a single unit It can accept input parameters and return output values

Function Similar to a stored procedure but always returns a value Functions can be used within SQL queries

14 Describe the concept of concurrency control in DBMS

Answer Concurrency control ensures that multiple users can access and modify data concurrently without compromising data integrity It uses techniques like locking timestamping and optimistic concurrency control

15 What are some common database security measures

Answer Authentication and Authorization Verifying user identity and granting appropriate permissions

Data Encryption Protecting sensitive data from unauthorized access

Access Control Lists ACLs Specifying permissions for individual users or groups
