Death And The Dervish Writings From An Unbound Europe Death and the Dervish Writings from an Unbound Europe The fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989 marked a watershed moment in European history The iron curtain that had divided East and West for decades crumbled ushering in an era of political and cultural upheaval As the dust settled a new landscape emerged one marked by the complexities of newfound freedom and the uncertainties of a rapidly shifting world This article explores the literary landscape that emerged from this unbound Europe focusing on works that grapple with the themes of death memory and the search for identity in the wake of monumental change

Part I The Ghosts of the Past The collapse of totalitarian regimes unearthed a wealth of suppressed narratives and historical traumas Writers like Gnter Grass in his novel The Tin Drum 1959 and Milan Kundera in his novels The Book of Laughter and Forgetting 1979 and The Unbearable Lightness of Being 1984 had already explored the haunting legacy of totalitarian regimes In the postwall era this exploration intensified with authors like Svetlana Alexievich in her nonfiction book Voices from Chernobyl 1997 documenting the human cost of the Chernobyl disaster and Wadysaw Szpilman in his memoir The Pianist 1998 recounting his harrowing experiences during the Nazi occupation of Poland These works served as both historical record and lament acknowledging the scars of the past while offering a glimpse into the human spirits resilience

Part II Searching for Identity in the New Europe The fall of the Berlin Wall also sparked a profound sense of existential questioning as individuals grappled with their newfound freedoms and the complexities of a reunified Europe Authors like JM Coetzee in his novel Disgrace 1999 set in postapartheid South Africa explore the theme of guilt and redemption in a society attempting to heal from a deeply fractured past Kazuo Ishiguro in his novel Never Let Me Go 2005 set in an alternate reality Britain explores themes of memory identity and the human condition in a world grappling with the consequences of scientific advancements These narratives while set in different geographical contexts resonate with the anxieties and uncertainties of the 2 new Europe where the lines between past and present East and West and individual and collective identity blur

Part III Death as a Metaphor for Transition Death a recurring motif in literature took on a new significance in the postwall era It served as a metaphor for the death of old ideologies the death of a way of life and the death of a sense of certainty Christa Wolf in her novel Cassandra 1983 written during the Cold War but deeply resonant in the postwall era explores the power of prophecy and the inevitable nature of societal change Milan Kundera in his later novels like Identity 1998 explores the fluid nature of identity and the everpresent possibility of change even as the shadow of death looms ricEmmanuel Schmitt in his novel Oscar and the Lady in Pink 1998 a poignant exploration of a childs understanding of death reflects on the acceptance of mortality and the fragility of life in a world of constant flux

mysticism symbolizes the search for meaning and the pursuit of spiritual enlightenment through constant motion and transformation The dervishs dance a whirling journey toward transcendence embodies the spirit of a Europe navigating the complexities of its new reality The writings of Orhan Pamuk in novels like The Black Book 1990 and My Name Is Red 1998 exploring themes of cultural identity memory and history in Turkey offer a glimpse into the intricacies of a region grappling with its own turbulent past Javier Maras in his sprawling novel A Heart So White 1992 a complex exploration of love betrayal and the search for meaning reflects the uncertainty and introspection that characterized the postwall era Conclusion The literature of the unbound Europe is a testament to the enduring power of human creativity in the face of profound change Through narratives of death memory and the search for identity writers from across the continent explored the complexities of a world in transition offering a rich tapestry of perspectives on the challenges and possibilities of a newly unified Europe These works serve as a reminder that even in times of upheaval the human spirit like the dervish continues to dance towards meaning seeking to understand the past embrace the present and shape the future 999 words 3

much of the debates in this book revolves around milan kundera and his 1984 essay the tragedy of central europe kundera wrote his polemical text when the world was pregnant with imminent social and political change yet that world was still far from realizing that we would enter the last decade of the twentieth century with the soviet empire and its network of satellite states missing from the political map kundera was challenged by joseph brodsky and györgy konrád for allegedly excluding russia from the symbolic space of europe something the great author deeply believes he never did to what extent was kundera right in assuming that if to exist means to be present in the eyes of those we love then central europe does not exist anymore just as western europe as we knew it has stopped existing what were the mental cultural and intellectual realities that lay beneath or behind his beautiful and graceful metaphors are we justified in rehabilitating political optimism at the beginning of the twenty first century are we able to reconcile the divided memories of eastern or central europe and western europe regarding what happened to the world in 1968 and where is central europe now the book applies an interdisciplinary analytical framework based on social psychology theories of inclusion and exclusion to a discussion of legal discourse and the development of legal frameworks in europe concerning migrants asylum seekers refugees and european citizens it adopts a psycho historical perspective to discuss the evolution of international and european law with regard to the rights of citizens and asylum seeking non citizens from the law s inception following the second world war up to present day laws and policies the book reveals the embracing of a european identity based on human rights as the common feature in european treaties and institutions one that is focused on european citizens and has inclusionary objectives however a cognitive dissonance can also be found as this common identity making runs counter to national proclivities as well as securitized threat perception oriented perspectives that can produce exclusionary manifestations concerning persons seeking asylum in particular a view of inclusion and exclusion via legal categorizations of status as well as distributions of social and economic rights draws attention to the links between social psychology and international law what emerges in the analysis a process of creating value is present both at its psychological roots and the expressions of value in the law fundamentally speaking the emergence of laws and policies that center on human beings and human dignity when understood from a psychological and emotion based perspective has the potential to transcend the dissonances identified this exciting and original volume offers the first comprehensive critical study of the recent profusion of european films and television addressing sexual migration and seeking to capture the lives and experiences of lgbtiq migrants and refugees queering the migrant in contemporary european cinema argues that embodied cinematic representations of the queer migrant even if at times highly ambivalent and contentious constitute an urgent new repertoire of queer subjectivities and socialities that serve to undermine the patrolled borders of gender and sexuality nationhood and citizenship and refigure or queer fixed notions and universals of identity like europe and national belonging based on the model of the family at stake ethically and politically is the elaboration of a transborder consciousness and aesthetics that counters the homonationalist xenophobic and homo trans phobic representation of the migrant to europe figure rooted in the toxic binaries of othering the good vs bad migrant host vs guest indigenous vs foreigner bringing together 16 contributors working in different national film traditions and embracing multiple theoretical perspectives this powerful and timely collection will be of major interest to both specialists and students in film and in a remote albanian village a place of banishment a stranger appears claiming to be viktor dragoti and looking for his long lost love that viktor dragoti has been dead for nine years killed by the albanian coast guard while trying to swim to freedom only adds to the stranger s mystery and to the suspense of this curiously real and yet otherworldly work by one of albania s most distinguished writers with echoes of the return of martin guerre and kafka s the trial with allusions to the odyssey and the albanian folktale of ago ymeri a legendary hero released from the underworld for one day shehu s novel blends the autobiographical and the historical the personal and the political into a powerful tale a story that conveys the terrors small and large of a totalitarian state while capturing all that is surreal and even lyrical in life in such a deeply distorted world the debate on law governance and constitutionalism beyond the state is confronted with new challenges in the eu confidence in democratic transnational governance has been shaken by the authoritarian and unsocial practices of crisis management the ambition of this book which builds upon many years of close co operation between its contributors is to promote a viable interdisciplinary alternative to these developments conflicts law constitutionalism is a concept of transnational governance which derives democratic legitimacy from the supranational control of the external impact of national decision making on the one hand and the co operative responses to problem interdependencies on the other the first section of the book contrasts europe s new modes of economic governance and crisis management with the conditionality of international investments and reflects upon the communalities and differences between emergency europe and global exceptionalism subsequent sections substantiate the problématique of executive and technocratic rule explore conflict constellations of prime importance in the fields of environmental and labour law and discuss the impact and limits of liberalisation strategies throughout the book european and transnational developments are compared and evaluated addressing the relationship between law and the visual this book examines the importance of photography in central east and southeast european show trials the dispensation of justice during communist rule in albania east germany and poland was reliant on legal propaganda making the visual a fundamental part of the legitimacy of the law analysing photographs of trials this book examines how this message was conveyed to audiences watching and participating in the spectacle of show trials the book traces how this use of the visual was exported from the soviet union and imposed upon its satellite states in the immediate aftermath of the second world war it shows how the legal actors and political authorities embraced new photographic technologies to advance their legal propaganda and legal photography drawing on contemporary theoretical work in the area the book then challenges straightforward accounts of the relationship between law and the visual critically engaging entrenched legal historical narratives in relation to three different protagonists to offer the possibility of reclaiming and rewriting past accounts as its analysis demonstrates the power of images can also be subversive and as such the cases it addresses contribute to the discourse on visual epistemology and open onto contemporary questions about law and its inherent performativity this original and insightful engagement with the relationship between law and the visual will appeal to legal and cultural theorists as well as those with more specific interests in stalinism and in central east and southeast european history this books main aim is to explore the history of the yugoslav idea or yugoslavism between the states creation in 1918 and its dissolution in the early 1990s the key theme that emerges is that yugoslavism was a fluid concept understood differently at different times by different yugoslav nations leaders and social groups
