the question of whether China and India can cooperate is at the core of global geopolitics as the two countries grow their economies the potential for conflict is no longer simply a geopolitical one based on relative power influence and traditional quarrels over land boundaries this book assesses the varying interests of China and India in economics environment energy and water and addresses the possibility of cooperation in these domains containing analyses by leading authorities on China and India it analyses the nature of existing and emerging conflict describes the extent of cooperation and suggests possibilities for collaboration in the future while it is often suggested that conflict between the giants of Asia is the norm there are a number of opportunities for cooperation in trade international and regional financial institutions renewable energy development and climate change and shared rivers this book will be of interest to researchers in the fields of asian studies international relations and asian politics at the outset this book must be viewed as a policy relevant document rather than an abstract historical research paper the authors have revisited the seemingly intractable india china border dispute from a contemporary conflict resolution perspective and thus are relatively detached from the historical baggage that has so often influenced other commentaries on this controversial subject the great natural defensive line of northern india the mighty himalayas separating tibet from north east india is a barrier which by tradition was impenetrable this defensive line is embodied by the 1914 line india s non negotiable interest thus from an indian perspective it can never be conceived that its frontiers with china are ever formalized on the brahmaputra plains further the 1914 alignment aside from its strategic sanctity also upholds the ethnic and linguistic affinities to peoples south of it who are distinct from the homogenous tibetan or han people similarly from china s perspective it too is in possession of its non negotiable interest the aksai chin plateau and therein lies the essence of an east west swap by retracing the historical record the authors argue that such a swap is eminently feasible and historically justifiable moreover realpolitik demands it from the indian perspective however it should be equally clear that a bipartisan national consensus is imperative for any breakthrough resolution to emerge it remains to be seen however if political managers on both sides are able to muster the necessary will to resolve a dispute that has lasted for more than half a century contents introduction acknowledgments the legacy of the great game india tibet and china india inherits the frontiers 1947 1954 the debacle of 1962 road to rapprochement diplomacy since the 1970s the way forward mutual accommodation and accommodation of reality appendices bibliography index this book examines the changing dynamics of the issues between india and china in the wake of extensive globalisation economic slowdown the trade wars covid 19 galwan and the undercurrents in the emerging new global order providing a comprehensive overview of india china relationship and the role of the usa in the context of india s economic and security cooperation in the region it argues that india china relations are too complex to be defined through the binary of friendship and enmity since it includes an element of cooperation competition coordination and as well as conflict and confrontation the book also opens new avenues for research as such it is of interest to researchers and students of asian studies asian history china studies peace and conflict studies and international relations in recent decades asia s ascent has been contextualized as the rise of two major neighboring countries in asia india and china besides voluminous work on the prospects and convergences between the two currently they stand at an intersection of time where suspicion and mistrust veils the confidence a degree of uncertainty arises from the more profound paradoxes and india has been falling short in escaping the tailspin china has created in the bilateral regional and global economic dynamics india s china relations is not just about boundaries and boycott of chinese products the root of the relationship lies in deficiency of trust knowledge and repository of experts on china to deal with india s china tailspin effectively one must know and comprehend china thoroughly this book brings out several aspects of india s political economic relations with china on the table the book underlines the fact that while leveraging china s inherent contradictions india has to deleverage from china s subtle global aspirational designs of domination besides analyses on leadership state capitalism and geo economics the book describes special cases such as the trade war structural conflicts in chinese political economy bangladesh china india myanmar economic corridor wto negotiations maritime trade belt and road initiative and taiwan to better elaborate the stakes involved in dealing with china the recent boundary tension created a long tailspin which in turn set off a raucous debate over china s economic diplomacy and how india could comprehend it well please note taylor francis does not sell or distribute the hardback in india pakistan nepal bhutan bangladesh and sri lanka this book examines the dynamics of the modern relationship between china and india as key emerging powers in the international system india and especially china have received much attention however most analysts who have studied sino indian relations have done so through a neorealist lens which emphasizes the conflictual and competitive elements within the overall relationship this has had the effect of obscuring how the china india relationship is currently in the process of transformation drawing on a detailed and systematic analysis of the interlinked and increasingly important issues of maritime security in the indian ocean region energy demands and concerns and economic growth and interchange amardeep athwal shows that not only is there an absence of mutual threat perception but sino indian bilateral trade is increasingly being framed institutionally and china and india are also beginning to coordinate policy in important areas such as energy policy he concludes that neorealist accounts of sino indian relations have difficulty in explaining these recent developments however rather than rejecting neorealist explanations in their entirety he points towards a theoretical pluralism with an appeal to soft realism and theories of neoliberalism and peaceful change china india relations will be of interest to scholars of international relations and politics international business and asian studies as two asian giants and rising power the interactions between india and china have global significance this book analyses the multifaceted and multi layered character of sino indian relations since the beginning of the 21st century in a period marked by cooperation and competition positioned in a social constructivist framework that emphasizes mutual perceptions and socialization the book draws analytical leverage from two core concepts national identity and national interest to form the basis of the research inquiry the author argues that the dynamics of national identity and national interest play an important role in determining their relations and shows how and why in the current international structure including a context of accelerated globalization their national identities as rising power and emerging power coupled with national interest of economic development have defined and directed their international positions and foreign policy making a unique approach to analysing sino indian relations this book is of interest to academics in the fields of asian politics and international relations a review of the existing literature on the china india comparative theme conveys the distinct impression that the literature largely projects china and india as intrinsically competitive entities while much has been written on where and why china and india are contesting particularly from a political sense very little attention has been devoted to mutual collaboration whether existing or potential such possibilities are at their greatest in economics which will dominate the future china india relationship this book explores sino indian ties from a comparative economic perspective and argues that it is erroneous to visualise the ties either from exclusively competitive or collaborative perspectives the future relationship between the two countries will be characterised simultaneously by two factors competition and collaboration which are both linked to common challenges facing them arguing that while competition in the economic sphere is inevitable given their size and aspirations the book contends that negative externalities from competition will encourage both countries to collaborate and expand the scope of such collaboration the book's refreshing angle makes it a must read for those interested in sino indian relationship
