visual ethnography refers to the study of the social world where drawing photography film and digital techniques are commonly used to record aspects of everyday life alongside the interrogation of visual culture this entry provides a background to the field of visual ethnography and reflects on both its historical applications across different disciplines and its contemporary uses as an approach to social research methods the entry asks how do researchers collect and generate visual data in answering this question it focuses on how researchers do a visual ethnographic study setting out different approaches to and techniques of creating visual data including assemblages of photographs collections of artefacts and the participatory techniques of film mapping and collage the second question how do researchers analyse visual materials leads to a discussion of how researchers come to know the visual artefact itself and the social contexts in which images are made and viewed offering visual ethnographers new opportunities to understand social practices and relationships as they are articulated through the visual lastly the entry turns to issues of dissemination and attends to the challenge how do researchers negotiate ethics visibility and representation in response a number of approaches are presented as ways to ethically present and re represent visual data to engage audiences and generate impact the entry notes that visual ethnography has much to offer the field of social research but that it is important that researchers continue to work on developing its methodological analytical and ethical agendas for the future the entry provides a foundation for gaining an understanding of visual ethnography and a basis for engaging with this project of development offering strategies for negotiating best practice in fieldwork analysis and visual audiencing visual methods such as drawing painting video photography and hypermedia offer increasingly accessible and popular resources for ethnographic research in working images prominent visual anthropologists and artists explore how old and new visual media can be integrated into contemporary forms of research and representation drawing upon projects undertaken both at home in their native countries and abroad in locations such as ethiopia and venezuela the book s contributors demonstrate how visual methods are used in the field and how these methods can produce and communicate knowledge about our own and other cultures as well as focusing on key issues such as ethics and the relationship between word and image they emphasize the huge range of visual methods currently opening up new possibilities for field research from cartoons and graphic art to new media such as digital video and online technologies contemporary anthropology is done in a world where social and digital media are playing an increasingly significant role where anthropological and arts practices are often intertwined in museum and public intervention contexts and where anthropologists are encouraged to engage with mass media because anthropologists are often expected and inspired to ensure their work engages with public issues these opportunities to disseminate work in new ways and to new publics simultaneously create challenges as anthropologists move their practice into unfamiliar collaborative domains and expose their research to new forms of scrutiny in this volume contributors question whether a fresh public anthropology is emerging through these new practices ethnography has become something of a buzzword in recent years it is talked about and invoked in disciplines ranging from anthropology and ethnology to literature history business administration and design studies textbooks that teach ethnography tend to imbue students with the impression that ethnography is a mode of systematic investigation by which the researcher gets closer to the realities of people s everyday lives but how straightforward are these processes in reality as ethnography spreads into new folds of research both within and without the academy the contributions in this volume demonstrate the manner in which field methods are adjusting transforming or taking new forms altogether if textbooks might lead students to believe that observations and interviews are the grounds upon which good ethnography can regularly be produced the authors in this volume take as their point of departure the realisation that ethnography is being used in a multitude of different contexts which forces them and us as readers to question the regularities and irregularities of their own work brings together in one volume a number of key theoretical and methodological advances in the anthropological study of religion chapters cover important topics not ordinarily included in books dealing with the anthropology of religion e g bipedalism the study of alcohol film and video images notions of religious agency in addition this collection is intended to build bridges between anthropologists of religion and religious studies scholars over the last four decades anthropologists have grappled with the dialectical relationship between the examination of cultures from the emic or insider perspective and the etic or outsider perspective nowhere is this creative tension more evident than in the anthropological study of religion in this volume anthropologists and religious studies scholars come to terms not only with a landscape that has shifted fundamentally but a landscape that is still shifting essays in this collection raise new and important issues for the anthropological study of religion in new and important ways in intensely personal essays a number of contributors address two fundamental concerns in the study of religion 1 how should anthropologists deal with the beliefs and practices of others and 2 how should anthropologists deal with their own religious backgrounds and beliefs as these may affect their understanding of the beliefs and practices of others a partial resolution to both questions is necessary before the anthropological study of religion can advance to a higher level this work examines the reasons why anthropologists have not used the camera as a research instrument or film as a means of communicating ethnographic knowledge it suggests that images and words in this discipline operate on different logical levels that they are hierarchically related that whereas writings may encompass the images produced by film the inverse of this cannot be true the author argues for this position further by suggesting that the visual is to the written mode as thin description giving a record of the form of behaviour is to thick description giving an account of meaning
