using the methods of frankfurt school theorists walter benjamin and theodor adorno david suchoff offers new readings of dickens melville and kafka that underscore the political and social critiques inherent in their novels suchoff's aim is to redeem the critical power of mass culture in the modern novel and he argues that ideological battles fought in american literary criticism during the cold war decades have limited our current interpretations of mass culture's critical force in political fiction. Suchoff demonstrates how the works of these nineteenth and early twentieth century novelists were taken up into the cold war literary canon and made to fit the arguments of American liberal critics for subversive fiction and of new historicist critics for a contained modern novel. Applying Benjamin's redemptive criticism and Adorno's dialectical method, Suchoff's readings of Dickens, Melville, and Kafka show how the political problems posed by mass culture and audience for each writer became part of the dialectically critical grain of their most important social novels. He examines Dickens's struggle with Victorian taste and the relation of his work to advertising and other nonliterary forms. Melville's confrontations with popular ideologies of American expansion and race, and Kafka's concern with the popular Yiddish theater and Jewish political movements throughout. Suchoff reveals the continuing importance of commodity culture in the novel tradition and the concurrent development of cultural criticism. Critical theory and the novel provides a useful introduction to Benjamin and Adorno and their uses in practical criticism. It is also an illuminating study of the historical origins of literary theory and cultural criticism and a contribution to the expanding field of cultural studies.

The Ends of Critique re-examines the stakes of critique in the 21st century in view of increasingly complex socio-political realities and shifts in a fully globalized world. The roles and manners of critique also change. The volume offers an unprecedented re-examination of critique under those conditions of global entanglement and asymmetrical relations from a diversity of scholarly perspectives within the humanities. All contributions move the notion of critique into more diverse traditions than the Eurocentric Kantian tradition and emphasize the need to attend to a plurality of critical perspectives. The volume's reflections move critique toward a situated, perspectival and entangled critical stance with interventions from decolonial and systemic deconstructive and post-humanist perspectives. In that way, the volume develops a decidedly different approach to critique than recent considerations of critique as post-critique (Felski) or those indebted to Frankfurt School thought and liberal theories of democracy. It is the first full-length research publication of the interdisciplinary research network Terra Critica.
