human-centered one. Sister Callista Roy's adaptation model provided another crucial lens. It viewed the individual as a complex adaptive system interacting with the environment, striving for equilibrium. This framework provided a powerful tool for analyzing patient responses to illness and stress. Similarly, Dorothea Orem's self-care deficit theory highlighted the importance of assisting patients in performing self-care activities, empowering them to regain control over their health. Each theory, like a meticulously crafted sail, captured a different aspect of the complex winds of patient care.

The Late 20th and Early 21st Centuries: A Multifaceted Approach

The late 20th century and beyond witnessed a diversification of theoretical perspectives. The ship, now fully equipped, is navigating a vast and dynamic ocean. No longer confined to a single perspective, nursing theory incorporates elements of systems thinking, chaos theory, and complexity science. Madeleine Leininger's cultural care theory, for instance, emphasizes the importance of understanding and respecting cultural differences in providing culturally competent care. This is the ship adapting to different currents, learning to navigate diverse waters effectively. Furthermore, the rise of technology and informatics has profoundly impacted nursing theory. The use of electronic health records, telemedicine, and big data analytics has not only transformed practice but has also spurred the development of new theoretical frameworks focused on technology integration and data-driven decision-making. This is the installation of advanced navigation systems: precise, efficient, and future-oriented.
