this volume presents a cross section of current research on the internal syntax of determiner phrases (DPs) with special emphasis on the analysis of DPs modified by genitive adjectival and other non finite attributes possessors predicates and movement in the DP illustrates clearly the ongoing debate over older and more recent approaches to the syntax of DPs in particular in the wake of the minimalist program (Chomsky 1995) and Kayne's antisymmetry hypothesis (Kayne 1994) the relative theoretical coherence among the contributions permits detailed comparison of specific syntactic proposals providing a solid basis for further debate several of the papers address the syntactic questions in parallel with related semantic or morphological issues the value of this collection to the study of universal grammar is also underlined by its comparative bias analyses of Germanic Romance and Balkan languages figure prominently and a number of new empirical generalizations within and between languages are discussed every human language has some syntactic means of distinguishing a negative from a non negative sentence in other words every speaker's syntactic competence provides a means to express sentential negation this ability however may be expressed in different ways as shown by the fact that individual languages employ different syntactic strategies for the expression of the same semantic function of negating a sentence Zanuttini's goal here is to characterize the range of such variation by comparing the different syntactic means for expressing sentential negation exhibited by the members of one language family the Romance languages and by reducing the differences we witness to a constrained set of choices available to the particular grammars of these languages this sort of analysis is a first step towards the ultimate goal of determining and understanding what limits there are on the syntactic options that universal grammar imposes on the expression of sentential negation this book contains a peer reviewed selection of papers presented at the 46th linguistic symposium on Romance languages (LSRL 46) that took place in April 2016 at Stony Brook University (SUNY New York) the most current research and debates on bilingualism historical linguistics morphology phonology semantics sociolinguistics and syntax can be found in its pages this collection will be of interest to Romance linguists and general linguists as well
