form and image in the fiction of henry miller is a study of allegorical patterns in miller's major fiction the cities characters and scenes of his fictional world are described as events in the development and integration of the self the analysis which draws on several disciplines for its insights especially on the psychoanalytic studies of c g jung is a deliberate and detailed attempt to explore the extent to which such insights can successfully support and assist a literary analysis consequently no biographical context for the explications is provided neither miller's knowledge of psychoanalytic theory nor the details of his personal life are the concern of this study the focus is on the fiction itself and the actions of the mind it may dramatize the great miller cities of paris and new york are seen as projections or images in which the psychic landscape of the developing self has been given fictional form the characters are not discussed as characters familiar to readers of the novel but as figures of the mind which borrow only their superficial characteristics from the twentieth century scene the nature of their form shows that many of them are aspects of one archetype against which the i of millers fiction struggles the development of this i provides the allegorical dimension in the fictional world of miller and becomes the subject of his confession the frankly described sexual adventures that prevented many of miller s works from being distributed in this country until fairly recently are identified as parts of the archetypal world other analyses can satisfactorily defend miller s obscenity but recognizing the relationship between the sexual imagery and other archetypal images provides a reading that reveals the allegorical character of his fiction and the unity of its action for a generation of contemporary anglo american novelists the question why write has been answered with a renewed will to believe in the ethical value of literature dissatisfied with postmodernist parody and pastiche a broad array of novelist critics including j m coetzee toni morrison zadie smith gish jen ian mcewan and jonathan franzen champion the novel as the literary genre most qualified to illuminate individual ethical action and decision making within complex and diverse social worlds key to this contemporary vision of the novel s ethical power is the task of knowing and being responsible to people different from oneself and so thoroughly have contemporary novelists devoted themselves to the ethics of otherness that this ethics frequently sets the terms for plot characterization and theme in the novel and the new ethics literary critic dorothy j hale investigates how the contemporary emphasis on literature s social relevance sparks a new ethical description of the novel s social value that is in fact rooted in the modernist notion of narrative form this new ethics of the contemporary moment has its origin in the new idea of novelistic form that henry james inaugurated and which was consolidated through the modernist narrative experiments and was developed over the course of the twentieth century in hale s reading the art of the novel becomes defined with increasing explicitness as an aesthetics of alterity made visible as a formalist ethics in fact it is this commitment to otherness as a narrative act which has conferred on the genre an artistic intensity and richness that extends to the novel s every word alex miller the ruin of time is the first sole authored critical survey of the respected australian novelist s eleven novels while these books are immediately accessible to the general reading public they are manifestly works of high literary seriousness substantial technically masterful and assured intricately interconnected and of great imaginative intellectual and ethical weight among his many prizes and awards alex miller has twice won the miles franklin literary award for the ancestor game in 1993 and journey to the stone country in 2003 the commonwealth writers prize also for the ancestor game in 1993 and the new south wales premier s literary awards christina stead prize for conditions of faith in 2001 and lovesong in 2011 he received a centenary medal in 2001 and the melbourne prize for literature in 2012 in 2011 he was elected a fellow of the australian academy of the humanities having published his eleventh novel coal creek in 2013 which won the victorian premier s fiction award in 2014 miller is currently writing an autobiographical memoir with the working title horizons in the world of sex henry miller one of the most scandalous writers of the 20th century explains his literary project henry miller s bold explicit novels scandalized readers and remade the literature of his day in this uncompromising literary manifesto he argues that sex is at the heart of his writing because it is at the heart of life a vital force as essential as bread money work or play drawing on his own experiences and on the writing of his famously banned novels in paris he shows sex as a mysterious realm that must be explored if we are to be truly free trapped in a bizarre menage a trois with his volatile actress wife mona and her eccentric lover stasia miller s life descends into violent and passionate anarchy this is the story of miller s bizarre second marriage and its development into an extraordinary and legendary menage a trois
