a critique of graduate education in sociology and an evaluation of its shortcomings Mr. Sibley acknowledges the main and often opposing trends in the field and calls for mutual recognition and understanding. He also remarks that the study of sociology needs to have a clearer aim than it does at present. He claims that a science without theory is only a method and then outlines the training necessary for so great a change in outlook.

provides a forum for studies in the sociology of education and human social development. It publishes research that examines how social institutions and individuals' experiences within these institutions affect educational processes and social development. Such research may span various levels of analysis ranging from the individual to the structure of relations among social and educational institutions. The journal presents a balance of papers examining all stages and all types of education at the individual, institutional, and organizational levels.
