worldwide patterns of violence against women differ markedly from violence against men for example women are more likely than men to be sexually assaulted or killed by someone they know the united nations has defined violence against women as gender based violence to acknowledge that such violence is rooted in gender inequality and is often tolerated and condoned by laws institutions and community norms violence against women is not only a profound violation of human rights but also a costly impediment to a country s national development while gender based violence occurs in many forms throughout the life cycle this review focuses on two of the most common types physical intimate partner violence and sexual violence by any perpetrator unfortunately the knowledge base about effective initiatives to prevent and respond to gender based violence is relatively limited few approaches have been rigorously evaluated even in high income countries and such evaluations involve numerous methodological challenges nonetheless the authors review what is known about more and less effective or at least promising approaches to prevent and respond to gender based violence they present definitions recent statistics health consequences costs and risk factors of gender based violence the authors analyze good practice initiatives in the justice health and education sectors as well as multisectoral approaches for each of these sectors they examine initiatives that have addressed laws and policies institutional reforms community mobilization and individual behavior change strategies finally the authors identify priorities for future research and action including funding research on the health and socioeconomic costs of violence against women encouraging science based program evaluations disseminating evaluation results across countries promoting investment in effective prevention and treatment initiatives and encouraging public private partnerships highlighting gendered violence across layers of social and political organization from the military to the sexual this book explores the connections between international security intra state conflict and domestic violence international in scope it makes the links between the local and the global and between the public and the private in its discussion of gendered violence claiming that it is not enough to simply add women to international relations theory the contributors to this book brilliantly demonstrate how much more fruitful an in depth analysis of the different layers of gendered violence can be this book will be necessary reading for students and academics of women's studies international relations and political theory violence against women is a violation of women's human rights and a priority public health issue it is endemic worldwide while much has been written about it in industrialized societies there has been relatively little attention given to such violence in asian societies this book addresses the structural and interpersonal violences to which women are subject both under conditions of conflict and disruption and where civil society is relatively ordered it explores sexual violence and coercion domestic violence and violence within the broader community and the state avoiding sensationalised accounts of so called cultural practices in favour of nuanced explorations of violences as experienced in cambodia thailand burma indonesia malaysia the philippines bangladesh and india this book aims to provide an up to date and comprehensive introduction to the subject of domestic violence and its interaction with the criminal justice system including agencies such as the police the crown prosecution service the probation service and children's services the courts and the prison service as well as voluntary agencies such as women's aid the book also looks at how these various agencies work together at a local level and the coordinating role of the home office and the direction provided at a central level domestic violence and criminal justice examines the phenomenon of domestic violence the various forms it takes and the theories that have been put forward to explain it it takes an historical approach to examine policy and legislative developments over the last forty years and how those developments make themselves manifest today the authors provide an authoritative and critical account of the different agencies and the work they carry out both independently and jointly they also consider the limits of a crime centred response to domestic violence the book provides a conceptual framework in which domestic violence and criminal justice might be better understood it covers all the current issues in this field and it will be a source book in directing readers to further reading it will be essential reading for both students and practitioners in the field while promoting access to resources and systems of support for those affected by gender based violence is absolutely crucial this new book focuses attention on the important question of how communities can take action to prevent violence and abuse using examples of current research and practice the book explores the actions that can be taken in individual sectors of society our schools faith communities campuses on our streets and using new popular technologies the contributors draw on global examples to highlight the importance of learning from the study of the interaction between socio political contexts and effective policies and strategies to address gender based violence chapters take up the challenge of exploring the construction of effective programmes that address cognitive affective and behavioural domains they discuss what people know how they feel and how they behave and include the important challenge of how to engage men in working towards the elimination of gender based violence offering positive messages which build on men's values and predisposition to act in a positive manner importantly such strategies place the responsibility for preventing gender based violence on the society as a whole rather than on vulnerable individuals this book is essential reading for anyone interested in gender studies women's studies social work sociology law and health studies its unique approach focuses on the achievement of prevention at the earliest possible stage and examines the issue through a society wide but community focused lens
