the ethics is a philosophical treatise written in latin by benedict de spinoza the book is perhaps the most ambitious attempt to apply the method of euclid in philosophy spinoza puts forward a small number of definitions and axioms from which he attempts to derive hundreds of propositions and corollaries such as when the mind imagines its own lack of power it is saddened by it a free man thinks of nothing less than of death and the human mind cannot be absolutely destroyed with the body but something of it remains which is eternal according to spinoza god is nature and nature is god this is his pantheism in his previous book theologico political treatise spinoza discussed the inconsistencies that result when god is assumed to have human characteristics in the third chapter of that book he stated that the word god means the same as the word nature he wrote whether we say that all things happen according to the laws of nature or are ordered by the decree and direction of god we say the same thing nature to spinoza is a metaphysical substance not physical matter for spinoza god or nature being one and the same thing is the whole infinite eternal necessarily existing active system of the universe within which absolutely everything exists this is the fundamental principle of the ethics one of the early thinkers of the enlightenment and modern biblical criticism including modern conceptions of the self and the universe he came to be considered one of the great rationalists of 17th century philosophy inspired by the groundbreaking ideas of ren descartes spinoza became a leading philosophical figure of the dutch golden age georg wilhelm friedrich hegel said the fact is that spinoza is made a testing point in modern philosophy so that it may really be said you are either a spinozist or not a philosopher at all his philosophical accomplishments and moral character prompted gilles deleuze to name him the prince of philosophers closely knit fabric of spinoza s doctrine of man and nature and god and its practical import and thus to revivify a specimen too long deprived of its native air
