ethics demonstrated in geometrical order latin ethica ordine geometrico demonstrata usually known as the ethics is a philosophical treatise written by benedict de spinoza it was written between 1664 and 1665 and was first published in 1677 the book is perhaps the most ambitious attempt to apply the method of euclid in philosophy spinoza puts forward a small number of definitions and axioms from which he attempts to derive hundreds of propositions and corollaries such as when the mind imagines its own lack of power it is saddened by it a free man thinks of nothing less than of death and the human mind cannot be absolutely destroyed with the body but something of it remains which is eternal the first part of the ethics addresses the relationship between god and the universe tradition held that god exists outside of the universe created it for a reason and could have created a different universe if he so chose spinoza denies each point according to spinoza god is the natural world as with many of spinoza's claims what this means is a matter of dispute spinoza claims that the things that make up the universe including human beings are god's modes this means that we and everything else are in some sense dependent upon god the nature of this dependence is disputed some scholars say that the modes are properties of god in the traditional sense others say that modes are effects of god either way the modes are also logically dependent on god's essence in this sense everything that happens follows from the nature of god just like how as spinoza puts it it follows from the nature of a triangle that its angles are equal to two right angles since god had to exist with the nature he happens to have nothing that has happened could have been avoided and if a particular fate for a particular mode is fixed by god there is no escaping it or as spinoza puts it a thing which has been determined by god to produce an effect cannot render itself undetermined god's creation of the universe is not a decision much less one motivated by a purpose the second part of the ethics focuses on the human mind and body spinoza attacks several cartesian positions that the mind and body are distinct substances that can affect one another that we know our minds better than we know our bodies that our senses may be trusted that despite being created by god we can make mistakes namely when we affirm of our own free will an idea that is not clear and distinct
