at the core of henrik ibsen's art lay a bottomless talent for investigating the way people hurt one another but reading his four major plays is not painful at all rather they are thrilling and even delightful for the different ways the playwright captures and sustains our interest a doll's house 1879 the first play here presents the story of nora helmer a seemingly childlike housewife with a weakness for macaroons whose actual level of devotion to her husband and family is kept hidden until the threat of scandal exposes her to a surprisingly judgmental spouse even more of an attack on society ghosts 1881 is that much more melodramatic too much so for my tastes incest social disease people living together out of wedlock it's like ibsen wanted to cram every shocking thing he could think of into one play and finish it off with something more shocking still convoluted but never boring ghosts makes its points dares you to judge and leaves a mark though it's hard to call anything better than hedda gabler for pure rotten fun the master builder 1892 works even better at teasing out a rather convoluted concept that of will to power in an accessibly dramatic way to risk another shakespearian comparison it's like a twisted take on the tempest the title character halvard solness is tortured by the guilt of his success and the sense his accomplishment has been sped along by devils both good and bad add to the equation a longtime admirer of solness who dares him to challenge fate more boldly
